Salesman Now on the Way to India to Start Trouble—New Arrest in Hoboken.

Chandra Hanador Chakraberty, a thin-faced, falsetto-voiced Hindu, a native of Bengal, and a speaker of many languages, and Ernest Se Kunna, a German subject who calls himself "Doctor," were arrested yesterday morning charged with being concerned in a conspiracy hatched in New York, the purpose of which was the invasion of India through Chinese territory and the instigation of rebellions and uprisings throughout Great Britain's Asiatic empire. It is the view of the Federal authorities that the scheme was directed from Berlin. It is known that a Chinaman, selected to assemble the arms and ammunition to be used in the proposed rebellion, is now on his way to China, expecting to carry into effect his part of the plot.

Yesterday's arrest, according to the Federal authorities, may be only a beginning in the country-wide round-up of aliens of various nationalities who have taken advantage of American neutrality to plot on American soil against the Allies. Not only India, but Japan and China were to be the scene of activities looking to rebellion and anarchy, on the theory that trouble in those countries would lead to the diversion of help to the Allies.

Wolf von Igel, now on the high seas, a member of Count von Bernstorff's German Embassy staff, and who was indicted as one of the principals in the plot to destroy the Welland Canal, in Canada, figured in the latest disclosures as brought into court yesterday. Se Kunna admits that he and Chakraberty received at least $60,000 from von Igel, but the prisoner maintains that he received the money for "legitimate propaganda." The Federal authorities have not yet got from the doctor his definition of "legitimate propaganda." Se Kunna, however, swears that it had nothing to do with plots to wreck England's power in Asia.

Recently Visited Berlin.

Chakraberty admits that, traveling under a fraudulent Persian passport, he visited Berlin a few months ago and conferred with certain high officials of the German Government as well as with one Jodh Singh, a Hindu, said to be the head of the anti-British organization known as the Indian National Society. One of the German officials with whom Chakraberty is said to have conferred was Herr Dr. Waisendonck, the German Minister of Education, and the other is said to have been the present Foreign Minister, Zimmermann, who, according to one story, gave the Hindu a letter. No information was forthcoming as to whom the letter was addressed or the nature of its contents.

Chakraberty and Se Kunna were arrested shortly after midnight yesterday morning at 360 East 120th Street, a house they had bought, according to the Government agents, from which to direct their anti-British plots. A second house, in West Seventy-seventh Street, it is said, was purchased recently by the two, and it is understood that they had contemplated changing their headquarters to that house within a few days. This Seventy-seventh Street house was to have been used as a combination headquarters and club for Hindus in sympathy with the German scheme for the disruption of the Indian Empire.

The alleged conspirators were taken into custody by Captain Tunney and Lieutenant Barnits of the New York Detective Bureau. The police had been shadowing them for several weeks and located the headquarters building several weeks ago by trailing a German banker, who, it is said, conferred at various times with Chkrabarty and Se Kunna.

The prisoners were taken to Police Headquarters, where for five hours they were subjected to a cross-examination. For more than three hours the Hindu refused to admit a damaging fact. Then he gave in and is said to have admitted his trip last year to Berlin and his and Se Kunna's acquaintance with Von Igel, his conference with high German officials in Berlin, and that when he returned to New York Von Igel turned over the $60,000 to himself and the doctor.

Many Hindu Documents.

A thorough search of the house was made, and in the cellar the police found a large quantity of documents, many of them written in Hindu characters, which documents are being translated into English. The detectives found no explosives, but they did find a lot of 2-inch aluminium boxes which at first aroused suspicion till Dr. Se Kunna said they were pillboxes for a patent medicine he had promoted.

After the cross-examination at Headquarters the prisoners were taken to the Federal Building and turned over to Captain William M. Offley, Chief of the New York Division of the Department of Justice Bureau of Investigation. The evidence in the case was

Anna Gould's Son Cited for Bravery in Army

PARIS, March 6.—Georges de Castellane, the second son of Count Boni de Castellane, has been cited in army orders.

His mother was formerly Anna Gould of New York, now Duchess of Talleyrand-Perigord. The citation follows:

"Georges de Castellane, of the French Dragoons, has given entire satisfaction in his mission as Chief of Dispatch Bearers in a district often bombarded. He has given proof of courage and coolness, and went voluntarily to the aid of the wounded under a violent bombardment."

JAIL PRO-GERMAN ENLISTED IN GUARD

CONVICTED ON THE BORDER

Letter, Intercepted by British, Said 10,000,000 Germans Here Would Revolt.

ST. PAUL, Minn., March 6.—Convicted of furnishing military information to Germany, Paul L. Scharfenberg, St. Paul, private in Company L, First Infantry Regiment, Minnesota National Guard, is now a prisoner in the United States Military Prison at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., sentenced to a term of five years.

The sentence was inflicted by a court-martial of regular army officers at San Antonio, Texas, on Feb. 15. The court-martial also ruled that Scharfenberg, a native of Germany, but a naturalized American citizen, should be dishonorably discharged from the guard.

News of Scharfenberg's treachery and its detection and punishment was brought to St. Paul today by the officers of the returning First Infantry. Apparently the whole matter had been hushed up carefully at San Antonio.

A letter addressed to relatives in Germany, asserting that 10,000,000 Germans in the country were ready to rise up against the Government in the event of war with Germany, was intercepted by the British authorities and transmitted to Washington officials, according to statements made in this city.

According to the officers, the letter referred to officers of the United States Army as cowards, and predicted that President Wilson would soon run out of the White House and that the Government had 150,000 men on the border, but that they wouldn't stand up if put against an efficient force.

Scharfenberg said he had a brother living in St. Paul, refer guard officers reported, and denied writing the letter himself. A comparison of the letter was made with samples of the accused man's writing, and he was convicted and sentenced. The letter was said to have been written from Llano Grande, Texas.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—The fate of Paul L. Scharfenberg of St. Paul, the private in the First Minnesota Volunteer Infantry who has been sentenced to five years' imprisonment for furnishing information to the German Government, will depend on the review of his case in the War Department.

The military authorities here have no official information of the case. Major Gen. Pershing, commanding the Department of the South, will have to review the findings and refer the case on to Washington if counsel for the prisoner sees fit to take that course, which, in all probability, in view of the heavy sentence, they will do.

While the contents of the letter he wrote were braggadocio rather than information, nevertheless army officers conversant with practice in petty courts said tonight that it certainly constituted conduct prejudicial to good order. Under the articles of war, they said, it was an offense punishable with imprisonment. A high official said that the term of five years' imprisonment for such conduct seemed out of proportion to the gravity of the offense, and he believed Scharfenberg would probably get off with a lightened punishment.

CALLS ARMED SHIPS PIRATES

And Says Safety Cannot Be Guaranteed to Neutrals on Enemy Vessels.

DEFENDS BARRED ZONES

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Austria's answer to the American memorandum as to the Central Empires' policy of submarine warfare, received today, is far from satisfactory to the United States Government.

What the latter wished to know was whether Vienna supported Berlin in the ruthless U-boat warfare that began on Feb. 1; whether it was the purpose of the Austro-Hungarian Government to follow the German policy of sinking unoffending merchantmen without warning within the arbitrarily established blockaded areas, and whether the pledges given in the Ancona and Persia cases were to be observed, or had been revoked, just as were the pledges given by the German Government in the Lusitania and Sussex cases.

The Austrian reply, like most of the important notes from that Government to the American Government dealing with controversies growing out of the invasion of neutral rights in the present European war, is long, cumbersome, and, on account of imperfections of translation, crude and difficult of understanding in many of its most important paragraphs. The official text has not been made public by the State Department, and when it is given out for publication it may be found to read a little more smoothly than the unofficial Reuter text from Vienna, printed in the newspapers this afternoon.

Secretary Lansing admitted today that the full text of the note had been received from Ambassador Penfield, but declined a request to make the note public until he and the President had an opportunity to read it very carefully. Nor would Secretary Lansing authorize any comment on the impression produced by the Vienna note upon the Washington Government or indicate the action the Administration would take on the basis of this communication.

The note failed to produce a favorable impression, according to what could be gleaned semi-officially, and while the complete official view will not be made known until the Austrian communication has been carefully studied by the President and Secretary Lansing, there is a very strong feeling, almost a conviction, in well-informed quarters here tonight that the declaration of Austria's attitude will be followed by a break in friendly relations between the Vienna and Washington Governments.

The principles set up and defended in the Vienna Government's outline of its attitude toward the rights of neutrals in submarine warfare are so contrary to those for which the American Government has contended, and run so counter to the pledge given by Vienna in the Ancona case, that they cannot be accepted by the Washington Government, it is asserted, without sacrifices of the great principles for which the United States Government has risked a break with Germany, and possibly actual hostilities.

In the Ancona case the Austro-Hungarian Government gave this pledge:

"The Austro-Hungarian Government can positively concur in the principle that enemy private vessels, so far as they do not flee or offer resistance, shall not be destroyed before the persons aboard are secured."

This was interpreted by the Washington Government at the time it was given as a guarantee that unless merchantmen offered resistance or tried to escape they would not be sunk without warning or without provision for the safety of the human beings on board. It was, in essence, regarded by the State Department and the President as identically the same pledge that had been given by Germany in the Lusitania and Sussex cases.

The Austrian Government now takes the position that regardless of the rights of neutrals on the high seas—their right to safe and free peaceful traffic everywhere outside of the three-mile territorial limit around the world's coasts—fighting nations like Germany and Austria may mark off thousands of square miles of the high seas and, by arbitrarily terming such action a blockade, bar neutral as well as enemy merchantmen from entering such "blockaded" areas except at their own risk.

The right of any belligerent nation so to pre-empt the right of neutrals to use such large areas of the high seas is vigorously challenged by the American

Mikado Sends Greetings on President's Inauguration

WASHINGTON, March 6.—The Japanese Ambassador today presented the following message from the Japanese Emperor to President Wilson, which is taken to be Japan's answer to the proposal in the Zimmermann letter for a German-Japanese-Mexican alliance against the United States.

"On the occasion of your inauguration as President of the United States of America we desire to offer our sincere congratulations and to express our ardent wishes that your administration may be attended by brilliant successes in the future as it has been in the past, and that the United States may grow more and more in prosperity."

MOSQUITO FLEET TRAPS 48 U-BOATS

CARMANIA IS HERE, ARMED

Cunarder, Besides 6-Inch Gun, Has Smoke Screen Device —Baltic Due Today.

A monster fleet of 500 trawlers from Grimsby, Hull, Leith, Yarmouth, Lowestoft, and other North Sea fishing ports, aided by fast destroyers and patrol boats, is guarding the mouth of the English Channel and Irish Sea with nets, bombs, and other devices for catching and destroying submarines, according to one of the first-cabin passengers of the Cunarder Carmania, which arrived here yesterday from Liverpool. His statement was confirmed by officers and crew of the liner's staff.

The passenger, who did not wish his name to be used, said that when he was at Devonport dock yard on Feb. 21 one of the Admiralty officials informed him that the German Navy was credited with having 100 submarines of all sizes, from the old type of submersible, 90 feet long, which operated from Zeebrugge, Belgium, to the latest U-boat from Kiel, ranging from 195 to 250 feet long. The result of the defensive move on the part of the Admiralty was that the mosquito fleet had destroyed or captured forty-eight between Feb. 1 and Feb. 16, which caused the big decrease in the number of vessels torpedoed after that date.

Very few of the submarines were captured and brought into port, it was said, as it was much trouble to raise them. A few were taken on the surface after they had been disabled by a bomb from an airplane. The others were destroyed by bombs from the trawlers after they had been entangled in the steel nets.

While he was in Devonport, the passenger said, he saw three of the latest type of British submarines, which are built on motor-like lines. Beam and depth have been sacrificed to give these undersea craft a length of 330 feet and a speed of 22 knots on the surface. Going at full speed they scarcely show above the water's edge, with the exception of the conning tower.

The Carmania, which brought sixty-one passengers and 2,000 sacks of mail, is the first liner to reach New York equipped with the smoke screen apparatus invented by the British Admiralty as a protection against submarine attack. On each side of the afterbridge, where there is always an officer on watch, a big ventilator, through which dense clouds of chemical smoke belch forth, is set in operation by the pressure of an electric button on the bridge or on the forward bridge, and will hide the vessel for a distance of five miles. In addition to this device, the Carmania is protected by a new naval six-inch gun, which has a range of eight miles. It is handled by three gunners from the Royal Navy Reserve, and one of them is always on duty, day and night, during the voyage.

The Carmania left the River Mersey on Sunday night, Feb. 25, a short time before the operator picked up the call from the Laconia that she was sinking 156 miles west of the Fastnet Light. Captain J. W. F. Charles, who formerly commanded the Mauretania, did not give out the report of the disaster until last Friday night, when the liner was nearing the American coast.

First-cabin passengers, among whom were several New York and Chicago business men returning from London and Paris, said the Carmania went through the North Channel round the Isle of Man, and they did not sight any submarines. Several small patrol boats were passed on Feb. 26, but the Carmania was not convoyed.

Among the passengers was the Rev. Dr. John Kelman, pastor of St. George's Presbyterian Church, Edinburgh, who has come to visit his son-in-law, D. Jaffray of Princeton University, before he leaves for China to be a missionary, and Francis D'Arcy Godolphin Osborne, Secretary to the British Embassy at Washington.

The White Star liner Baltic, commanded by Captain Bertie Hayes, who had had charge of the Olympic since October, 1914, left Liverpool at the same time as the Carmania with passengers and mails and is expected to arrive this morning.

ORDUNA AT LIVERPOOL.

Mongolia Safe at London—The Patria Starts for Italy and France.

News was received yesterday by the Cunard Line agents that the Orduna, which sailed from New York on Feb. 24 with 110 passengers, of whom 9 were citizens of the United States, and 5,000 sacks of mail, had arrived safely at Liverpool.

The International Mercantile Marine Company received notice of the arrival of the Atlantic Transport liner Mongolia in London last Friday with a valuable cargo, and the Minnehaha is due here today from London.

TWO-THIRDS VOTE REQUIRED

REFORM EXPECTED TO CARRY

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Both parties in the Senate today took steps preliminary to a revision of the rules with a view to prevent filibustering. The leaders of the Senate wish to avoid the appearance of partisanship in the matter, particularly as an overwhelming majority of both parties favored the Armed Ship bill killed in the closing hours of the session by a handful of talkers. Both parties caucused on the subject simultaneously and appointed committees to confer together on a rule for cloture.

The two committees—six Senators from the Democratic caucus and five from the Republican—held a conference of two hours, at which it was evident that practically every one favored a rule in some form that would prevent a repetition of [illegible] filibuster. That there should be such unanimity of opinion in a joint committee including such different types as the radical Mr. Owen, Democrat, of Oklahoma, and Mr. Penrose, old-line Republican from Pennsylvania, is construed as indicating the force of popular indignation stirred up by the strangling of the Armed Ship bill. The President's prompt and scathing denunciation of the filibuster is also having marked effect.

Partisanship Subordinated.

The Democratic members of the joint committee are Owen of Oklahoma, Reed of Missouri, Smith of Georgia, James of Kentucky, Swanson of Virginia, and Walsh of Montana. The Republicans are Lodge of Massachusetts, Brandegee of Connecticut, Penrose of Pennsylvania, Borah of Idaho, and Cummins of Iowa. Although Mr. Cummins participated actively in the filibuster against the Armed Ship bill, both he and Mr. Borah as progressive Republicans favor limitation of debate that will permit votes to be taken. Even conservatives like Lodge, Brandegee, and Penrose are believed to be convinced that the right to filibuster cannot be allowed to last longer without great danger to the country.

Neither party in caucus sought to reach a partisan agreement on the form of the proposed rule, which was left entirely to the joint committee. The committee did not reach a full agreement on details and adjourned to tomorrow. But the conferees feel certain that some form of cloture will be adopted by the Senate at a comparatively early date, although a filibuster may have to be broken down before a vote on the new rule can be reached.

Brought Up in the Senate.

The subject of revising the rules came up as soon as the Senate convened. Mr. Owen, who would like to see the rules thoroughly revised, said that he regarded the Senate as having died on March 4, instead of being a continuing body. New members, he said, should not be bound by rules they had had no hand in framing.

This point was revived in another form when Mr. Lodge of Massachusetts reintroduced the Armed Ship bill and asked that it be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations. Mr. Owen, although he favors the bill, made the point that, according to his theory, the committee was not in existence. Mr. Thomas of Colorado made the further point that, as Congress was not in session, the Senate could not transact legislative business.

Vice President Marshall, who described himself as the only good-tempered person in the Chamber, sustained Mr. Thomas's point of order. He ruled that the Senate could not consider legislative matters when convened apart from the House. Mr. Lodge and Mr. Walsh argued that there was nothing in the rules or the Constitution to prevent consideration of such legislation, but no appeal was taken, and the ruling stood.

Incidentally, the Chair settled the question of the continuing nature of the Senate by ruling that the officers of the Senate held over from the late session.

Plan Tentatively Adopted.

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Modification of the Senate rules virtually was agreed upon tonight by a conference committee of Senators named by the party caucuses. The change proposed would put the power in the hands of two-thirds of the Senators present at

German Press Hail Senate Hold-Up as Wilson Defeat; La Follette and Stone Are Styled "Fine Americans"

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, March 6, (via Tuckerton, N. J.)—The essence of today's leading articles is that as long as there are men in the American Congress who "boldly refuse to have their country involved in the European slaughter merely for the sake of gratifying Wilson's vainglorious ambition, there is hope that the common sense of the American people will assert itself and that they will not permit the appalling insanity to spread to the New World that holds the Old World in a merciless grip."

The Frankfurter Zeitung compares the recent proceedings in Congress with those of the Parliaments of Rumania and Italy shortly before those two nations entered the war, and arrives at the conclusion that, although America has in President Wilson an improvement on Salandra and Bratiano, hard-headed men like Senators Stone and La Follette prevented him from sweeping the legislators off their feet and practically frustrated the President's plan to wrest from Congress privileges vested in it by the Constitution.

"The example of these fine Americans who remained uncontaminated by Wilson's blind devotion to England," the newspaper says, "was bound to make a deep impression, especially in the West, where the people surely could see no glory in being killed for the sake of the Union Jack."

The fact that the old Congress adjourned without definite result cannot but influence the new Congress, new members of which have to thank the pacifists for their elections, the Frankfort paper asserts.

PRESIDENT EAGER TO ACT

Only Wants to Know That Law Gives Him Full Power to Arm Ships.

CONFERS WITH LANSING

Also Visits Daniels and Decision Is Expected Now at Any Time.

WANTS GREGORY'S OPINION

Attorney General Engaged in Supreme Court and Has Not Yet Given His Views.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Conferences today between President Wilson and Secretaries Lansing and Daniels are expected to be followed soon by some definite statement from the President as to what he intends to do with reference to arming merchant vessels. No announcement as to the President's attitude came tonight from the White House or either of the executive departments concerned, but the opinion exists in official circles that the President has the question under consideration from a new angle, and soon will arrive at a decision.

It was intimated yesterday in an official quarter that the President had called upon Attorney General Gregory to advise him as to whether the law of 1819 or any other statutes would interfere with the arming of merchant ships by the Government, and that the Attorney General had been instructed to report to the President within twenty-four hours. The Attorney General was busy on Supreme Court cases today, and it is understood that he made no report to the President on the subject. No statement was obtainable today from the Attorney General's office.

The President walked over from the White House to the State Department this afternoon for a short conference with Secretary Lansing. Afterward he was closeted with Secretary Daniels at the Navy Department for nearly an hour. Neither Mr. Lansing nor Mr. Daniels would discuss the President's visit, but there is reason to believe that the President found that his Secretary of State was in complete disagreement with the contention that the piracy law of 1819 would prevent the legal arming of merchant ships in the present crisis.

Recalls President's Statement.

When the Senate filibuster killed the Armed Ship bill, the President was of the opinion that the law of 1819 was a bar to his arming merchant ships to resist German submarines. That night, when he issued his statement, he was still of that opinion and said so in the statement. But after the statement was given to the press the President directed that its phraseology be changed so as to express a doubt of the applicability of the old law to the present situation.

It was understood that the doubt had been placed in the President's mind by Secretary Lansing. Since then the President and the Secretary of State have had no opportunity to discuss the matter at length until this afternoon when the President paid his visit to Mr. Lansing's office. While all information as to the details of their conversation was refused, no doubt is felt in official circles that Mr. Lansing told the President that the law of 1819 did not serve as a bar to the right of the Executive to furnish armament to merchant ships in the present crisis.

The positive feeling that the President was so advised by Secretary Lansing is based on the knowledge that officials of the State Department not only reached the conclusion on their own account that the law of 1819 did not forbid the use of Government armament on American merchant ships against German war vessels operating under the Admiralty orders to sink on sight, but were strongly impressed by the opinions of ex-Attorney General George W. Wickersham, Paul Fuller, and other lawyers, that the President was vested with full power to take measures for the protection of American commerce at sea. What influence these and other views furnished to the President had upon his prior belief that the ancient law stopped him from arming merchant ships for the purpose intended is not known.

President Anxious to Act.

It was said in an official quarter today that the President was anxious and willing to carry out his desire to furnish armament to merchant vessels if he could find that he had the authority to do so without the express sanction of Congress. He was credited with the intention to take affirmative action at the earliest available moment if he became satisfied that Secretary Lansing was right and those upon whose advice he issued his statement of Sunday night were wrong.

It is believed now that the President is dependent more on the opinion of Secretary Lansing as to the applicability of the 1819 statute on account of Mr. Lansing's familiarity with international law and practice than on the views of the Department of Justice.

It was supposed at first that the long talk between the President and Secretary Daniels this afternoon had reference to the matter of providing armament for merchant vessels, but it was said subsequently that the conversation related largely to the effort to obtain

President Repeats He Is Angry Over Defeat of Armed Ship Bill

Throws Reserve Aside in Speech at White House Luncheon to Democratic Committee and Vigorously Attacks the Senate Filibuster —Declares the Present Is No Time for Partisan Factionalism.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—President Wilson threw aside all reserve today in expressing his opinion of those Senators who blocked the passage of the Armed Neutrality bill. He unburdened himself to members of the Democratic National Committee at a luncheon given at the White House.

The text of the President's talk was not made public, and members of the committee were reluctant to tell of it afterward. But enough was learned to warrant the statement that Mr. Wilson was unsparing in his criticism of those who resorted to a filibuster to thwart the will of the Senate majority in a critical period of the nation's history.

"It was a straight-from-the-shoulder speech," said one member of the committee, "but I do not feel at liberty to quote the President's words. I will say, however, that the ears of certain Senators would have burned had they heard it. Who those Senators are you are at liberty to guess."

The President declared he was "mad" over the attitude of the little group of Senators who held up the armed ship bill, and indicated that he hoped for better results if he tried again to secure its passage. The present, he said, was no time for partisan or factional consideration in international affairs, because the need that America prove united in efforts to safeguard its interests was imperative. He decried bitterness in public discussions of the situation.

The President's outburst both surprised and pleased the Democratic organization leaders, it was said. The luncheon was entirely informal, and a speech was not on the program. The President spoke of the record the party had made during the last four years, declared his belief that it had demonstrated its ability to do things, and predicted that it would continue to hold the confidence of the people. Then he launched into the events of the last few days.

Speaking of the European war, he said that a stable peace was only possible if it produced a condition in the monarchies abroad akin to conditions prevailing in the United States. He declared that no Government could prosper that did not respect the rights of the governed. He asserted that the strife now anguishing Europe had not been brought about by the people of those countries, but regardless of their wishes and desires.

The President referred to the condition of Alsace-Lorraine as typical of causes of war which must be avoided if permanent peace was to be achieved. Reiterating his hope that the United States would play a part in building up a structure for the maintenance of permanent peace after the war, he declared that such a peace could be founded only on just principles meeting the aspirations of the people of the world.

The President spoke with great earnestness, particularly when he castigated those Democrats who joined with Republicans in the Senate to embarrass the Administration at a time when the highest order of patriotism was necessary to enable the Government to cope with a delicate situation. He aroused his hearers and sent them away imbued with the idea that it was imperative at this time to have a country united in patriotic purpose.

CITIZENS OF WHEELING THREATEN LA FOLLETTE

Assert They Will Egg the Senator if He Makes Scheduled Appearance—Still Wishes to Speak.

Special to The New York Times.

WHEELING, W. Va., March 6.—Despite the fact that citizens in a mass meeting here last night protested against the appearance here next Thursday of Senator Robert M. La Follette, the Senator is anxious to make his scheduled lecture. In a message received today by Rabbi A. H. Silver, in whose temple he is scheduled to deliver an address on "The Undermining of Democracy," Senator La Follette says he will come here unless his appearance is canceled or Senate duties interfere.

Feeling here is running high, and a number of citizens have intimated they will "rotten egg" the Senator if he comes to Wheeling. At Monday's meeting Senator La Follette was denounced and telegrams stating the action were sent to him. He has not replied to them.

A canvass of the 300 subscribers to the temple lecture course, whom the Senator is to address, is being taken. About half of the number have been heard from, and the sentiment regarding cancellation of Senator La Follette's appearance is about evenly divided.

Unless a majority of the members vote to cancel the engagement, the Senator will be permitted to speak, so far as the Lecture Course Committee is concerned.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Up to a late hour tonight Senator La Follette had received no advices from Wheeling in regard to his engagement to speak there next Thursday night. He fully expects to keep his contract unless something in the situation in the Senate should occur to prevent. It was said today that he had not received any communication from Wheeling to indicate that there was ill feeling there against him.

Berlin Lokal-Anzeiger Calls President's Inaugural Address Proof of His Megalomania.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, March 6, (via London.)—Commenting on Wilson's inaugural address, the Lokal-Anzeiger says:

"Exactly the same day a hundred years ago James Monroe was inaugurated as President. His successor, Wilson, in the capital Washington, tore to pieces the document upon which the foreign policy of the United States has been based for the last hundred years, the so-called Monroe Doctrine. For nothing less can be the meaning of his inauguration speech.

"The whole speech is nothing else but an attempted justification of the new law born in his head, by which he seeks to impose upon the people of the whole world the forms within which in the future international relations shall be regulated. This arrogance, which is very much akin to megalomania, is happily also in reverse proportion to the means at his disposal for the realization of his programs.

"But that is not the most outrageous feature of his speech. The worst is the apparent intention, recurring in almost every sentence, to shine as a great peacemaker by insidiously twisting or veiling the truth at the moment when he is about to enter the world war without the slightest need, after he has been guilty of prolonging it wantonly by Anglophile neutrality and by unpardonable sins of omission.

"It was no great injustice to America that her immense commerce with Germany and Austria was destroyed by England, but it is a crime when we, after three years of untiring patience, find ourselves compelled to stop a certain complicity with our enemies which cost the lives of more brave German soldiers than can ever be killed, even by the most ruthless U-boat war.

"Now what does Wilson demand for his countrymen? He demands the right to sell to one or two belligerents the weapons to kill, he demands that the other even countenance that right. He demands the right to make war on the other if he refuses to countenance this monstrous demand and to ally himself to the first belligerent. Such is the right Wilson insists on for all humanity. He calls it the right of decent treatment, justice, and liberty, the right to live (by insisting on which thousands of others have suffered death)—in reality, the demands of monstrous inhumanity.

"Never has Washington's capital been so shamelessly desecrated by a speech than that of Wilson's, who in every sentence demands for himself the title of the most just and most honest of mortals and at the same time reveals himself as the most unjust and the most dishonest man who ever was head of a great nation. And if he says nothing in the world will change his ideas, his intentions, the millionfold answer will echo across the ocean:

"'No threat with armed ships, no declaration of war, will open our blockaded to American munition traders.'" material and labor at shipyards which are engaged in building war vessels for the navy.

Secretary Lansing declined to comment on the subject of the President's visit or to discuss his view of the applicability of the statute of 1915. He admitted that he had been conversant with the existence of this statute for some time, and in answer to a direct question said that he knew of it when President Wilson went to Congress on Feb. 26, and asked that he be authorized to furnish arms to merchant vessels.

The opinion is very general in Washington that the President is so anxious to know just what authority he has with respect to providing measures of protection for American merchant vessels, that he is expediting the search of authorities and will make a statement soon as to the conclusion reached.

FISKE DISCUSSES PLAN TO ARM OUR SHIPS

Says It Will Not Be Adequate Defense Against Submarines and Will Not Protect Commerce.

Rear Admiral Bradley A. Fiske, U. S. N., retired, said yesterday that officers of the United States Navy were a unit for the arming of American merchantmen, although he pointed out that these officers realized that armed merchantmen had none too good a chance to survive in a conflict with a submarine, since, as he put it, "a submarine is a submarine only when it fights from a submerged position."

"Do you believe that putting guns on a merchant ship provides a good defense against submarines?" Admiral Fiske was asked.

"A submarine boat is built," Admiral Fiske replied, "primarily to fight battleships, and secondarily cruisers and smaller types of war vessels, and as she fights those vessels only when submerged she is then the true submarine. On the other hand, when the submarine fights from the surface she is not then operating as a submersible. For these reasons the gun is not much of a defense against a submarine operating as a submarine. Against unarmed craft the submarine may well operate on the surface, but when a vessel is armed that is another matter.

"There is no question but that all naval officers favor putting guns on liners, but at the same time we realize that it is not an adequate defense."

"What do you think of the naval scheme to drop submarine chasers overboard when American ships approach the barred zone?"

"I should suppose that the use of motor boats under certain good weather conditions might prove good results," Admiral Fiske replied. "The boats are quite fragile, however, and the difficulties of getting them out and in, if the sea was rough, would be very considerable and no would their use under other conditions."

Admiral Fiske spoke yesterday at the luncheon of the Trustees of the American Defense Society. In his address Admiral Fiske said that the primary defense should be the development of the power of the United States on the sea. Theories that the German Navy never would come over here to fight were discounted by Admiral Fiske when he said that navy men who had made a study of the war were not so sure that the German fleet would not ultimately cross the Atlantic for battle with our vessels off our coast."

INDICTED FOR SINKING SHIP.

Captain and Men of German Steamer at Charleston to be Tried.

FLORENCE, S. C., March 6—Captain Johann R. Klattenhoff and eight officers and men of the German steamer Lebenfels were indicted by a Federal District Court Grand Jury here today on charges of having deliberately sunk the warbound Hansa Line freighter in Charleston Harbor Feb. 1.

The indictment charges the sinking of the steamer endangered navigation. The cases will be called for trial tomorrow. Captain Klattenhoff and the officers and crew are at liberty on bons of $3,000 each.

SEEK "IRON CROSS" IN CUBA.

American Detectives Hunting for German Plotters There.

HAVANA, March 6.—Since the news reached Cuba of the German plan to embroil Mexico and Japan with the United States, much interest has been taken in the stories of German intrigue in Cuba with the object of fomenting rebellion. In the text of the Zimmermann note was made public, little credence was placed in such stories, but the Cuban public generally is now becoming more inclined to this view. Two Germans have been arrested thus far in Cuba, one of them known to be a close friend of ex-President Gomez, one of the leaders in the revolt. The other is held on suspicion of being a spy; he is alleged to have been urght in the act of making drawings of the coast near Pinar del Rio.

According to El Mundo a number of American detectives are in Havana working in secrecy with Cuban investigators with the object of ascertaining if there exists here a branch of an organization known under the name of "The Iron Cross," which is alleged to be perfectly organized in Mexico, having for its purpose the spreading of anti-American propaganda in Latin-American countries. Members of the association, says El Mundo, are distinguished by an iron finger ring, on which is an iron cross.

Count Michael Karolyi, leader of the Hungarian Independent Party, is generally credited with taking an active part in the agitation in Austria-Hungary in favor of preserving friendly relations with the United States through modification of unrestricted submarine warfare. A dispatch printed in THE NEW YORK TIMES on Feb. 18 quoted Count Karolyi as saying, in the Pesti Hirlap: "I deeply regret the phase of the war into which we entered with the declaration of submarine warfare." The Berner Bund of Feb. 7 printed a dispatch from Budapest which, after saying that the speakers of all parties in the Chamber of Deputies had expressed their agreement with Premier Tisza in his approval of unlimited submarine warfare, continued:

"Only Count Michael Karolyi raised scruples, in the name of his party, against the intensification of the submarine warfare. He would greatly regret it if it should come to a war between the Central Powers and the United States. The fate of more than 2,000,000 Hungarian citizens living in the United States would become critical in case of war."

BRAZIL IS CALLING HER NATIONALS HOME

Minister to Germany Admits They Are Told Travel Difficulties Are Growing.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, March 5, (via London, March 6.)—THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent inquired at the Brazilian Legation today with regard to the Reuter report that all Brazilians in foreign countries had been ordered to return home.

It was stated that the Brazilian Government had sent no orders to that effect, but had merely instructed its diplomatic and consular representatives in all the belligerent countries to give its nationals friendly advice to return home immediately because traveling conditions were constantly becoming worse and delaying their departure. Hence Brazilians might find themselves stranded in some out of the way place where the Government would be unable to aid them. The Minister refused to discuss the suggestion that the increasing difficulty of traveling, which his Government predicted, would be a natural consequence of the increasing effect of the U-boat war.

REICHSTAG UPHOLDS ZIMMERMANN PLOT

Budget Committee Regrets the "Misfortune" Which Led to Exposure of Intrigue.

SOCIALISTS OPPOSE STEP

BERLIN, Monday, March 5, (by Wireless.)—The expected criticism of the Government's ill-starred German-Mexican project failed to materialize in today's session of the Reichstag Budget Committee.

After an executive sitting of six hours the committee unequivocally indorsed the action of the Foreign Office by unanimous vote. The Government's efforts to negotiate an alliance, in the eventuality of war with the United States, was approved as being within the legitimate scope of military precautions. The committee expressed regrets at the misfortune which resulted in the interception of Foreign Secretary Zimmermann's note. Responsibility for its loss cannot be fixed until former Ambassador von Bernstorff arrives from the United States.

After Foreign Secretary Zimmermann had given his report in regard to the instructions to the German Minister in Mexico, the subject was debated by members of the Reichstag. Reporting the debate, the Overseas News Agency says that a National Liberal member reminded the committee that President Wilson had attempted to instigate neutrals against Germany. He said he was unable to object to Dr. Zimmermann's action.

Members of the Socialist minority criticised unfavorably the Foreign Secretary's move. Their remarks evoked energetic protests from a member of the Catholic Party. One of the Progressives said that criticism based on the fact that the American Government had learned of the note should be postponed until after the arrival of former Ambassador von Bernstorff.

A Conservative member declared Dr. Zimmermann's move was unobjectionable and should be indorsed. The objections raised by the members of the Socialist minority were criticised by other Socialists.

LONDON, March 6.—The German Government's plan for involving Mexico and Japan in war with the United States, in the event of hostilities between Germany and America, was heralded in a public address before the Reichstag by the Foreign Secretary, Dr. Alfred Zimmermann, as quoted in a Reuter dispatch from Amsterdam. Replying to objections raised by a Socialist member to the Mexican proposals, Dr. Zimmermann said:

"We were looking out for all of us, in the event of there being the prospect of war with America. It was a natural and justified precaution." (The version of Dr. Zimmermann's remarks received by wireless from the official Overseas News Agency of Berlin reads at this point: "What Germany looked about for allies, in the event of the outbreak of war with America, is natural and justified foresight.") "I am not sorry that through its publication in America it also became known in Japan.

"For the dispatch of these instructions a secure way was chosen which at present is at Germany's disposal. The wireless version reads: 'For the transmission of this dispatch the safest way was chosen which was at our disposal at that time.'") "How the Americans came into possession of the text which was sent in America in special secret code we do not know. That these instructions should have fallen into American hands is a misfortune, but that does not alter the fact that the step was necessary for our patriotic interests.

"Least of all are they in America justified in being excited about our action. It would be erroneous to suppose that the note made a particularly deep impression abroad. It is regarded as what it is—justifiable defensive action in the event of war."

GERMAN PRESS ON INTRIGUE.

Deplore "Misfortune" of Its Publication, but Justify the Move.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, March 6, (via Tuckerton, N. J.)—The news that Mexico denies any knowledge of the Zimmermann letter came not unexpectedly, since the letter itself explained it was "not to be communicated to Carranza until after America joined the Allies." There is much speculation among press and public as to the manner Wilson obtained possession of the document. All newspapers deplore that misfortune of the smuggled letter fell into Wilson's hands, but they also ridicule the moral indignation of the Entente press, their diplomacy having exerted itself to the utmost to induce Italy to renounce her duties to the Central Powers and join in the war against them, while Rumania succumbed to the lure of fictitious prizes held out to her by the Entente.

Wilson's attempt to array the neutrals against Germany and his pressure on China to join him are regarded on a par with the Entente's diplomatic effort, though less successful. The newspapers recall the fact that in 1837 President Buchanan offered Santa Anna of Prussia a treaty with Mexico to guard against being robbed of California and other provinces by the United States, which was refused.

BERLIN, March 5, (via London, March 6.)—Straggling editorials in which some earlier judgments are freely revised, constitute the sole reference to the German-Mexican incident in the public prints today. While the negotiations seeking an alliance with Mexico are defended here on military grounds, their political and geographical aspects are freely pilloried as a piece of awkward strategy.

Georg Bernhard, after discussing in the Vossische Zeitung the mysterious method by which the letter was conveyed to Ambassador von Bernstorff and its subsequent ill-starred career, expresses disapproval of details in the Zimmermann letter.

THEODOR WOLFF'S COMMENT.

"Jewel of Statesmanship Went Lost Between Berlin and Mexico."

The New York World published yesterday the following comment by Theodor Wolff, editor of the Berlin Tageblatt, on the Zimmerman note inviting Mexico and Japan into an alliance with Germany against the United States:

"The invitation to Mexico would have been a mistake if it had not strayed from the right road. The fresh spirit of enterprise it shows too impatiently eliminated sober judgment.

"The Minister to Mexico was instructed to hold out the conquest of Texas, New Mexico and Arizona to Carranza, and it would certainly be interesting to see the face of the wily Mexican when this offer was made. The idea, too, that through Carranza's mediation one could win over rather self-conscious Japan is somewhat strange. With Russia, England and America, all leading powers in Eastern Asia, standing on the other side, Japan will certainly not be very amenable to Mexico's influence. It is not probable one can help along the world's history in this way.

"Naturally no man says a word about morality in this connection; in the first place, morality has for a long time been that thing whose nonobservance is self-understood; secondly, it hasn't the least to do with the Mexican matter. It is not immoral to offer Mexico an alliance for the eventuality of war, and it would not be immoral even to sell Japan My yellow beauty, will you go with me?' One who does so is far from being a Machiavelli.

"Likewise, nothing justifies the charge that the authors of the plan have touched the fuse to the American powder barrel. The development of things would have been approximately the same, even without the Mexican correspondence. Neither should one condemn an action because it fails. The greatest diplomatic geniuses have occasionally gone wrong.

"After we have thus blown ourselves up with righteousness, we can quietly say that the jewel of statesmanship went lost between Berlin and Mexico."

AUSTRIA REAFFIRMS U-BOAT PLEDGES

Government, which does not regard the German and Austrian submarine war zones as legally established blockades, and it is the contention of the Washington Government that the Central Powers have no right to attempt to prevent American vessels from entering such zones.

The President, Secretary Lansing, and their advisers hold that American vessels, once within those zones, as everywhere on the high seas, must be dealt with according to the code of humanity and the rules of international law; that no non-resisting enemy merchant vessel shall be sunk without warning except when it tries to escape, and that American vessels must always be warned, and human life saved, before they are sunk.

The interpretation placed on the Austrian reply tonight is that Austria is quibbling over a great issue seriously raised by a great power. The Austro-Hungarian Government seems to take the position that a blanket warning, such as was given in the notes delivered by the Austrian and German Governments on Jan. 31, 1917, announcing the intention to engage immediately in relentless submarine warfare is to be accepted as sufficient warning to secure the lives on board merchant vessels sunk on sight after that date by Austrian submarines. Austria contends that when belligerent States engage in measures against enemy sea trade, the giving of a "general warning" is sufficient to protect all enemy vessels, and after such warning neutrals should not travel on such vessels, while neutral vessels enter the submarine barred areas only at their own risk. These contentions are challenged by the United States Government.

Threat Against Arming Our Ships.

The Austrian note states that it is the intention of the Austrian Government to regard armed merchantmen as piratical craft and not entitled to any warning before being sunk. This is regarded as a threat to deal with American vessels, when armed, as if they were piratical craft. In view of the intimate relations between the Berlin and Vienna Foreign Offices, this threat from Austria is interpreted as being likewise an intimation of the German Government's intention to deal with American merchantmen, when armed, as if they were hostile craft.

This, however, is not expected to make the situation any more acute than it is at present, as American vessels have no assurance that they will not be torpedoed without warning entering the barred areas, even when unarmed.

Delays Break Temporarily.

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Austria's reply to the American request for a clearer definition of her attitude in the submarine situation was stated officially here today to leave the door open for further negotiations, delaying temporarily at least the break which has been regarded as inevitable since the severance of relations between the United States and Germany.

Although in substance the long communication upholds and defends the unrestricted warfare waged by Germany, it is couched in most friendly terms and points out that "Austrian submarines solely are operating in the Adriatic and the Mediterranean, and interference or encroachment on American interests is hardly to be feared." There will be a reply to this note, and, unless an overt act precipitates the rupture both sides apparently earnestly desire, probably will not be inclined to force the issue for the present.

The truth is that Germany is credited here with trying to throw Austria to a stop which that country does not wish to take. Germany naturally wishes, it is pointed out, to have the complete moral support of her allies to the submarine campaign, and to attach great influence with Austria to that end.

Austria, therefore, is placed in the delicate position of either sacrificing the manifest benefits she receives from the continuance of diplomatic relations with this country or of appearing to fully to support her ally as a result, it is believed that she has made her reply to this country as strong an indorsement of Germany's position as possible without at the same time making it impossible for United States to continue the negotiations.

This opinion is based not only on dispatches from Ambassador Penfield at Vienna, but on the whole tenor and spirit of the Austrian note.

The complete official view of the Austrian communication will not be made known until after President Wilson and Secretary Lansing have carefully studied the official text, which was before them today.

Radical Opposition to Views.

Austria's effort to substitute for the individual warning every merchant ship is entitled by international law to receive before being torpedoing, a general warning to all vessels not to enter barred zones, cannot be accepted by this Government.

Furthermore, the United States contends now, and always has contended, that neutrals absolute enemy merchantships are entitled to safety. The declaration in the Austrian note that the "principle that neutrals in wartime also should enjoy the advantages of freedom of the seas refers only to neutral vessels, not to neutral persons aboard enemy vessels," in no way coincides with the position of the United States.

Neither is the United States disposed to permit establishment by Austria, of a rule that war on the sea involving reprisals is "an affair for settlement between belligerents," when the interests, rights, and lives of neutrals are affected.

In Austria's attempt in the communication to distinguish between the treatment which shall be accorded neutral and enemy merchant shipping is regarded in various quarters as being tenor what similar to Germany's effort to establish a "safety zone" for American liners between New York and Falmouth. The unofficial text, however, does not make it clear just what intentions Austria has toward neutral ships.

Although the Austrian communication declares that "there obviously is no reason to allow different principles for war on land and sea," the position of the United States is that different principles actually do govern because of different conditions, and the United States has contended and the various belligerents have, during the course of the war, virtually admitted that during hostilities international law cannot be changed without the consent of all the nations involved.

Another portion of the communication which undoubtedly will not meet with the approval of the United States is that having to do with defensively armed merchant ships. Austria's assertion that her previous assurances did not apply to armed merchant vessels was received with some surprise. The broad declaration that armed merchantmen "are to be regarded as pirate vessels, which may be destroyed," was regarded as being especially significant in view of the intentions of the United States regarding armament for its merchant shipping.

Notwithstanding the perplexity created in the minds of officials with a portion of the Austrian argument, the extreme reluctance felt here for a break with Germany's chief ally, and the fact that Austria also does not desire it, will assure the note a most friendly reading, and every effort will be made to harmonize the relations of the two Governments if it can be done without surrender by either.

See Much Harm in a Break.

Officials here have felt throughout that a break with Austria would serve little purpose and do much harm. America's protest against Germany's illegal submarine warfare is thought to have been fully enforced by a severance of relations with the Government of that country.

A break with Austria probably would be followed by one with Bulgaria and Turkey, placing American interests in those countries in jeopardy; would lead to many diplomatic readjustments because of the belligerents this country represents in Austria and the Austrian interests represented elsewhere, and would endanger the million or more prisoners for whom this country has been caring, as well as cut off a line of communication from Berlin.

Ambassador Penfield, under instructions from the State Department, has made full preparations for a break if it comes and for the withdrawal of the Consuls and other Americans.

TEXT OF VIENNA'S NOTE TO THE UNITED STATES

LONDON, March 6.—The American Ambassador at Vienna has received the reply of the Austrian Government to the American note inquiring as to the position of the Austrian Government in regard to unrestricted submarine warfare, according to a Vienna dispatch to Reuter's by way of Amsterdam. The reply declares that neutrals are responsible for losses they suffer by entering territory where warlike operations are taking place.

The American note, which was dispatched to Vienna on Feb. 18, asked specifically whether the Austrian assurances given after the sinking of the Ancona and the Persia had been nullified. The reply says that, "Whatever attitude the Washington Cabinet may take as to individual questions raised here," the Austro-Hungarian Government is "essentially in accord with the American Government in regard to the protection of neutrals against endangering their lives."

The memorandum then maintains that "neutral subjects have to bear themselves all losses they suffer by entering territory where warlike operations are taking place."

After a long discussion of the British blockade, which it declares illegal, the memorandum continues:

"The principle that neutrals should enjoy in war times the advantages of the freedom of the seas refers only to neutral vessels, and not to neutral persons aboard enemy vessels."

The reply further contends that belligerents are entitled to decide for themselves what measures shall be taken against an enemy in sea traffic, and concludes:

"In such cases neutrals have no other legitimate interests and therefore no other legal claim than that a belligerent inform them in time of a prohibition directed to an enemy so that they can avoid intrusting their lives and their goods to enemy vessels."

The memorandum, referring to the Austrian Government's note on the Ancona case, says that it "strictly adheres to the assurance already given."

Repeats Ancona "Reservation."

At the same time Austria calls attention to the fact that at the time of the Ancona incident it stated it "reserved the right to bring up later for discussion difficult international questions which arise in connection with submarine warfare." The memorandum then adds:

"If the Austro-Hungarian Government now refers to this reservation and briefly discusses the question of the sinking of enemy vessels to which that note refers, it is guided by a desire to show the American Government that now, as heretofore, it strictly adheres to the assurance already given and endeavors, by clearing up that important question because it touches the laws of humanity, to avoid misunderstandings between the Monarchy and the American Union."

"From the memorandum of Feb. 18 of the American Ambassador, the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister has concluded that the Washington Cabinet, in view of statements made on Feb. 10 of last year and on Jan. 31, 1917, by the Austro-Hungarian Government, is now in doubt regarding the attitude which Austria-Hungary will henceforth observe regarding the submarine war and as to whether the assurances given by the Austro-Hungarian Government to the Washington Cabinet, in the course of negotiations about the Ancona and Persia papers, have not been nullified by the aforementioned statement. The Austro-Hungarian Government is ready to make a clear and definite statement so that these doubts may be solved.

"The Austro-Hungarian Government may be allowed first of all to discuss briefly the methods employed by the Entente Powers in waging submarine war, because they are the starting point for the intensified submarine war begun by Austria-Hungary and her allies and also throw a bright light upon the attitude which the Austro-Hungarian Government has taken hitherto in regard to the questions which have arisen.

"When Great Britain joined the war against the Central Powers only a few years had elapsed since that memorable time when she, in union with other States, began to lay the foundation at The Hague for modern naval war law. Soon afterward the British Government had assembled in Holland representatives of the great powers in order to consolidate the further work of The Hague Conference, especially in the sense of a just arrangement between interested belligerents and neutrals. These efforts aimed at nothing less than the mutual establishment of principles of right which even in war times should embody the principles of freedom of the seas and the safeguarding of the interests of neutrals.

"Neutrals were not to enjoy these benefits for long. Hardly had the United Kingdom decided to participate in the war when, almost at once, it began to break down the barriers which the principles of international law had erected. While the Central Powers, in the very beginning of the war, had declared that they would observe the Declaration of London, which also bore the signature of the British representative, Great Britain threw overboard some of its important provisions, in an endeavor to cut off the Central Powers from supplies from overseas she enlarged, step by step, the list of contraband until nothing was missing in the list of things which today men want for their subsistence.

"Then Great Britain proclaimed what she called a blockade of the coasts of the North Sea, which form also an important commerce route for Austro-Hungarians, in order to prevent goods which were still missing in the list of contraband from entering Germany and in order to prevent all sea traffic by neutrals to those coasts as well as all exports through neutrals. That this blockade was in flagrant contradiction to the customary principles of the right of blockade, as established by international agreements, was explicitly declared by the President of the United States of America in words which will continue to live in the history of international law.

"By the illegal prevention of reports from the Central Powers Great Britain aimed at paralyzing the countless factories and works which the industrial and highly developed peoples of Central Europe had created and, by forcing workmen to be idle, to incite them to rebellion.

"When Austria-Hungary's southern neighbor joined the enemies of the Central Powers his first act was to declare as blockaded all coasts of the enemy, following, of course, the example of his allies in ignoring all the legal rights in the creation of which Italy had taken an active part a short time before. Austria-Hungary did not neglect to inform neutral powers at once that the blockade was not legal.

Long-Suffering Central Powers.

"For more than two years the Central Powers hesitated. Only then, and after long and careful consideration of pros and cons, did they begin to return like for like and attacked the enemy on the sea. As the only ones of the belligerents who had done everything to secure the existing treaties which were to guarantee to neutrals the freedom of the seas, they felt with pained hearts the law of the hour which commanded them to violate this freedom. But they took this step to fulfill the paramount duty toward their peoples and from the conviction that it would help the principle of the freedom of the seas to be victorious. The proclamations which they issued last January are apparently directed only against the rights of neutrals. In reality they serve toward the restoration of these rights, which their enemies have essentially violated and which, if they were victors, they would destroy forever. Thus the submarines which are cruising around the English coast announce to peoples who need the sea—and what people does not want to?—that the day is not far off when the flags of all States, in the glory of their newly won freedom, can freely fly over the seas.

"We cherish the hope that this announcement will find an echo everywhere where neutral peoples live, and that it will especially be understood by the great people of the United States, whose most illustrious representative has during the war defended with flaming words the freedom of the seas as the highway of all nations.

Working for "Freedom of the Seas."

"If the people and Government of the United States keep in mind that the blockade proclaimed by Great Britain is not only meant to wear down the Central Powers by starvation, but aims at subjecting the seas to her rule in order to establish in this way her tyranny over all nations, while on the other hand the blockade of England and her allies only serves to make these powers incline toward peace with honor and a guarantee to all nations of the freedom of sea traffic and of commerce and thereby a secured existence, then the question which of the two parties has the right on its side is already decided. Though the United States seems to believe that they will be entitled to look to neutrals to appreciate their efforts to revise, in the interest of all, the principles of international law and equal rights of nations.

"In replying now to the question put in the American note of Feb. 18, the Austro-Hungarian Government firstly remarks that in the exchange of notes referring to the cases of the Ancona and the Persia it restricted itself to defining its attitude to concrete questions which individually arose, without laying down its fundamental legal conception. But in its note of Oct. 19, 1915, referring to the Ancona case, it reserved to itself the right to bring up for discussion at a later date difficult international questions which arise in connection with submarine warfare. It now refers to this reservation and now briefly discusses the question of sinking enemy vessels, to which that note refers, it is guided by the desire to show the American Government that it now, as heretofore, strictly adheres to the assurance already given and endeavors by clearing up that important question arising from submarine warfare, because it touches the laws of humanity, to avoid misunderstandings between the monarchy and the American Union.

"Above all, the Austro-Hungarian Government desires to emphasize that it is also its opinion that the thesis set up by the American Government, which also is represented in various records, that enemy merchantmen, apart from cases of attempted flight and resistance, must not be destroyed without precautions being taken for the safety of the persons aboard, ought to say, to the power of the whole subject. Regarded from a higher standpoint, this thesis can, of course, be ranked in a further suggestive connection, and from that view its domain of application can be marked out more exactly.

"General Warning" Sufficient.

"From the laws of humanity, which the Austro-Hungarian Government and the Washington Cabinet take in the same manner as judging the lines, the more general principle can be derived that when executing the right of destroying enemy merchantmen the loss of human life should as far as possible be avoided. To this principle the belligerent can only do justice by issuing warning before exercising the right. Therein he can choose the way which the aforementioned thesis of the American Government indicates, according to which the commander of the war vessel himself gives warning so that the crew and passengers may bring themselves into safety in the last moment, or the Government of a belligerent State can, if this is recognized as an inevitable necessity of war, issue warning of full effect also before the departure of the vessel which is to be sunk; or, finally, it can, if it establishes extensive measures against enemy sea trade, employ a general warning for all enemy vessels in question.

"That the principle according to which care must be taken for the safety of the persons aboard undergoes exceptions the American Government itself recognized. But the Austro-Hungarian Government believes that destruction without warning is admissible not only when a vessel flees or offers resistance. It appears—to mention only one example—that the character of the vessel itself also must be taken into consideration. Merchantmen or other private vessels which carry a military garrison or arms aboard in order to commit hostile acts of any kind may, according to valid right, be destroyed without hesitation.

Austrian Ships Sunk Without Notice.

"The Austro-Hungarian Government need not call attention to the fact that the belligerent is released of all consideration for human life if his opponent sinks enemy merchantmen without previous warning, as happened with the vessels Electra (German) Bubrovnik (Austrian), Zagreb (Austrian), &c., which already has been repeatedly censured; and in this respect the Austro-Hungarian Government never returned like for like, notwithstanding its uncontested right. In the course of the entire war Austro-Hungarian war vessels have not sunk one enemy merchantman without previous, if only general, warning.

"The repeatedly mentioned thesis of the United States Government also allows various interpretations, in so far, namely, as it is doubtful whether, as is asserted from various sides, only armed resistance justifies the destruction of a vessel with persons aboard, or resistance of another kind; as is shown if the crew intentionally neglects to take the passengers into boats—the Ancona case—or if the passengers themselves refuse to enter boats. According to the opinion of the Austro-Hungarian Government, the destruction of a warned vessel without rescuing the persons aboard is admissible in cases of the latter kind, because otherwise it would be left to the individual passenger to nullify the right of belligerents to sink vessels.

"Moreover, it may be pointed out also that there is no unanimity as regards in what cases the sinking of neutral merchantmen at all is admissible. The obligation to issue a warning immediately before sinking vessels leads, according to the opinion of the Austro-Hungarian Government, on the one hand to harshness which could be avoided; on the other hand, it is under circumstances calculated to injure the justified interests of belligerents. In the first place, it must not be overlooked that the rescue of persons is almost always left to mere chance, as the only choice remaining is to take them aboard war vessels which are exposed to any enemy influence, or to expose them in small boats to the dangers of the elements; so that it therefore corresponds much better to the principles of humanity to prevent persons, by timely warning, from using endangered vessels.

Neutrals Must Not Use Enemy Ships.

"Furthermore, notwithstanding careful examination of all legal questions referring thereto, the Austro-Hungarian Government could not come to the conviction that subjects of neutral States are entitled to travel unmolested on enemy vessels.

"The principle that neutrals in war time also should enjoy the advantages of freedom of the seas refers only to neutral vessels, not to neutral persons on board enemy vessels, because belligerents, as is well known, are entitled to prevent the enemy's sea traffic as far as they are able. Being in possession of the necessary war means and considering it necessary for the attainment of their war aims, they can prohibit sea traffic of enemy merchantmen and neutrals of their destruction, provided they have previously announced this to be their intention, so that every one, whether enemy or neutral, has the chance to avoid endangering life. Even if doubts should arise regarding the justifiableness of such procedure, and if the enemy should threaten reprisals, then this would be an affair to settlement between the belligerents only, who, as generally recognized, are entitled to make the high seas the scene of military operations and to oppose any interference with their contraband and to decide for themselves what measures shall be taken against enemy sea traffic.

"In such cases neutrals have no other legitimate interest, and therefore no other legal claim, than that the belligerent inform them in time of prohibitions directed to the enemy, that they can avoid intrusting their lives and their goods to enemy vessels.

"The Austro-Hungarian Government can suppose that the Washington Cabinet will agree with these explanations, which, according to the Austro-Hungarian Government's firm conviction, are unassailable, as otherwise disputing their correctness would doubtless be tantamount to saying—which certainly does not correspond to the opinion of the United States—that neutrals are not free to interfere with military operations of belligerents or even directly assume the office of judging as to the war means which are to be employed against enemies.

Analogy of Land Warfare.

"It appears that it also would be a flagrant misunderstanding if a neutral Government, only to enable its subjects to travel on enemy vessels, while they as readily, and even with far greater security, could use neutral vessels, should fail to arms with a belligerent power which, perhaps, was fighting for its existence, not to speak of the most serious abuses for which the road would be left clear if the belligerents were to be forced to lower arms before every neutral who desired to use enemy vessels for his business or pleasure trips. Never was there the slightest doubt that neutral subjects themselves have to bear all the loss which they suffer by entering on land territory where warlike operations are taking place. There obviously is no reason to allow different principles for war on sea, the more so as at the Second Peace Conference the wish was expressed that, until the time when war on sea should have found a settlement by agreements, the law in force for war on land should be employed, as far as this was possible, also for war on sea.

"In the spirit of what was previously said, the regulation that warning must be given to a ship which is to be sunk under certain circumstances, in various kinds, under certain circumstances, for instance, as mentioned by the American Government, in cases of flight and resistance, when vessels may be destroyed without warning, while in other cases warning before the destruction of a vessel is necessary. The Austro-Hungarian Government can therefore state, whatever attitude the Washington Cabinet may take in regard to individual questions raised here, that it, as especially regards protection of neutrals against endangering their lives, is essentially in accord with the American Government, but it was not only satisfied to put into effect in the course of this war the conception represented by her, but beyond that it also accommodated its attitude with painful care to the thesis set up by the Washington Cabinet, and would feel inclined to support it in its endeavor to secure American citizens against dangers at sea, which endeavor it supports by the warmest philanthropy, and by instructing and warning those intrusted with it.

"As regards Circular Note 10,622 of last year, regarding the treatment of armed enemy merchantmen, the Austro-Hungarian Government, it is true, has to state that, as already mentioned previously, it is of the opinion that the arming of merchantmen, even solely for defense against the exercise of the right of capture, is not established by modern international law. A war vessel is obliged to come into contact with enemy merchantmen in a peaceful manner. It has to waylay the vessel by certain signals, to enter into communication with the Captain, to examine the ship's papers, draw up a protocol, and, if necessary, take an inventory, &c. Fulfillment of these duties presupposes naturally that the war vessel has full certainty that the merchantman, on its part, also will act peacefully. Without doubt, such certainty does not exist if the merchantman possesses armament which is sufficient to fight the war vessel. It can hardly be expected to discharge its duties under the muzzle of guns, whatever their purpose may be, without mentioning the fact that merchantmen of the Entente Powers, despite all assurances to the contrary, are—as this has been proved—provided with arms for an aggressive purpose and also use them for this purpose.

"It would also be a misinterpretation of the duties of humanity to demand that crews of war vessels expose themselves without defense to arms of the enemy. No State could value its duties of humanity toward the legal defenders of the Fatherland less than its duties toward subjects of foreign powers. The Austro-Hungarian Government therefore could have stated from conviction that its promise made to the Washington Cabinet did not extend, from the very beginning, to armed merchantmen, because they, according to the valid principle and right which restrict hostilities to organized forces, are to be regarded as private vessels, which may be destroyed.

"As history shows, it was never permitted under general international law that merchantmen oppose the exercise of the right of capture by war vessels. Even if a regulation of such kind could be found, this would not prove that vessels should be allowed to arm themselves.

It must also be taken into consideration that the arming of merchantmen would completely transform warfare on the sea, and that such a transformation cannot correspond with the intentions of those who endeavor to bring to bear the principles of humanity in warfare on sea. In fact, since the abolition of privateering no Government, until a few years ago, has thought of the least of arming merchantmen. At the Second Peace Conference, which was occupied with all questions of naval war law, the arming of merchantmen was not mentioned once. That silence, however, is significant because it was made by high naval officers, who freely declared: When a warship proposes to stop and visit a merchant ship, the commander sends a number of men in a small boat, will cause a cannon shot to be fired. A cannon shot is the best guarantee that can be given. Merchant ships have no cannon on board."

"Notwithstanding that, Austria-Hungary adhered to her promise also as regards this question. In the mentioned circular note neutrals were warned in time against intrusting their persons and property to armed vessels. The issued measure was not put in force at once, but a period of grace was given in order to enable neutrals to leave armed vessels which they had already boarded. Finally, the Austro-Hungarian war vessels themselves have been instructed, even in the case of encountering armed enemy merchantmen, if, in view of the circumstances, it is possible, to issue a warning and take care of the rescue of persons in time.

"The statement of the American Embassy that the armed British steamers Secundo, Uno and Welsh Prince were torpedoed by Austro-Hungarian submarines without warning is erroneous. The Secundo and Uno are listed in register registers as Norwegian vessels. The Austro-Hungarian Government meanwhile received information that no Austro-Hungarian war vessel took part in the sinking of these steamers.

"In the same manner as in the repeatedly mentioned circular note, the Austro-Hungarian Government—and therewith it comes back to the question of intensified submarine warfare—as mentioned at the beginning of this aide-memoire and also in its declaration of Jan. 31 of the current year, issued a warning to all neutrals by fixing a certain period. Moreover, the whole declaration represents in essence nothing else but a warning, namely, that no merchantmen will be allowed to enter the sea areas exactly described in the declaration.

"Moreover, Austro-Hungarian war vessels are instructed if possible to warn merchantmen encountered in these areas and to bring into safety the crews and passengers. The Austro-Hungarian Government also possessed numerous reports that crews and passengers of vessels which have been destroyed in these areas have been brought into safety. For the eventual losses of human life which nevertheless may occur in the destruction of armed vessels or such encountered in the barred zone the Austro-Hungarian Government can take no responsibility.

Little Risk From Austrian U-Boats

"Moreover, it may be pointed out that Austro-Hungarian submarines solely are operating in the Adriatic and Mediterranean, and that, therefore, an encroachment of American interests is hardly to be feared from Austro-Hungarian war vessels.

"In view of everything mentioned in the beginning of this aide-memoire there need hardly be an assurance that the barricading of sea areas described in the declaration does not aim at destruction of human life or even its endangering. But apart from the higher aim of sparing further suffering to mankind by shortening the war, and solely to place Great Britain and her allies, who, without an effective blockade over the coasts of the Central Powers, prevent the sea traffic of neutrals with these powers in the same isolation, the step is taken to render them by this pressure more pliable toward a peace which bears in itself a guarantee and is durable.

"That Austro-Hungary uses different means is especially caused by circumstances over which mankind has no power. The Austro-Hungarian Government is convinced that it has done everything in its power to avoid human losses. It would attain this aim, which is intended by the Central Powers, most quickly and most certainly if in those sea areas no single human life were lost and no single life were endangered.

Says Ancona Pledge Stands.

"Summarizing, the Austro-Hungarian Government can state that the assurance given to the Washington Cabinet in the Ancona case and which has been renewed in the Persia case has neither been abolished nor restricted by its declaration of Feb. 10, 1916, and Jan. 31, 1917. Within this assurance it will also in the future, united with its allies, do everything so that the peoples on earth will soon again participate in the blessings of peace. If in the prosecution of this aim, which, as is well known, finds full sympathy in the Washington Cabinet, it sees itself obliged to prevent neutral traffic in certain sea areas, in until a few years ago has thought of the least of arming merchantmen. At the Second Peace Conference, which was occupied with all questions of naval war law, the arming of merchantmen was not mentioned once. That silence, however, is significant because it was made by high naval officers, who freely declared: When a warship proposes to stop and visit a merchant ship, the commander sends a number of men in a small boat, will cause a cannon shot to be fired. A cannon shot is the best guarantee that can be given. Merchant ships have no cannon on board."

MUST GIVE APPAM BACK TO BRITONS

Restoration of German Prize Which Sought Refuge Here Ordered by Supreme Court.

OUR NEUTRALITY VIOLATED

Belligerents, the Court Holds, Cannot Make Our Ports Harbors of Safety.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—In a unanimous opinion the Supreme Court today decreed restoration to her English owners of the liner Appam and cargo, brought into Hampton Roads more than a year ago by a prize crew from the German raider Möwe. The ship and cargo, valued at between three and four million dollars, must be delivered within thirty days, as the court's order is final.

The decision, written by Justice Day, affirms decrees by Federal Judge Waddill of Virginia, and upholds the original ruling by Secretary Lansing that prizes coming into American ports unaccompanied by captor warships have the right to remain only long enough to make themselves seaworthy.

American neutrality was violated in bringing the Appam into Hampton Roads, the Court said, and neither the ancient treaties relied upon by Lieutenant Berg, the German prize commander, the Hague conventions, nor the declaration of London, entitled any belligerents to make American ports a place for deposit of prizes as spoils of war under such circumstances.

"The principles of international law, the opinion adds, "leaving the treaty aside, will not permit the ports of the United States to be thus used by the belligerents. If such use were permitted it would constitute the ports of a neutral nation harbors of safety into which prizes might be safely brought and indefinitely kept."

"From the beginning of its history this country has been careful to maintain a neutral position between warring Governments, and not to allow use of its ports in violation of the obligations of neutrality, nor to permit such use beyond the necessities arising from perils of the sea or the necessities of such vessels as to seaworthiness, provisions, and supplies."

Two cases were covered in the decision of the court. In both cases Lieutenant Berg was appellant. In the first case the British and African Navigation Company, owners, were appellees, and in the other Henry G. Harrison, master of the Appam, before she was captured, was appellee.

Analyzing the history of the Appam seizure, the court held that the Appam was not brought into an American port for any consideration that might fairly be supposed to be covered in the treaty which was cited by Count von Bernstorff. Justice Day pointed out that the Appam when captured was within 180 miles of Funchal, a neutral port, but steamed 3,051 miles to Hampton Roads for the express purpose of seeking protection under the terms of the treaty of 1799 between the United States and Prussia.

It was evident, said the opinion, that the long voyage was not to get fuel or food supplies, but simply for the purpose of placing the Appam in an American port until the end of the war. The court held that the principles of international law, recognized by the United States did not permit any such use of American ports by belligerents.

Justice Day cited the fact that President Washington denied American ports to the French Government when it was asked if privateers might be fitted out here against British commerce, and this led to the enactment of the neutrality law of 1794 and later that of 1819. This policy was affirmed in the deliberations resulting in The Hague treaty of 1907. The court interpreted the treaty of 1799 to mean that a belligerent prize might be brought into American ports under stress of necessity as any warship might come and be freely carried out again by the captors to proceed to a home port or to such places as may be named in their commissions.

"The Appam's use of one of our ports," Justice Day said, "was very far from that contemplated by the treaty. We cannot avoid the conclusion," continues the court, "that in thus making use of an American port there was a clear violation of the neutral rights of the United States." The court then holds that the admiralty courts of this country should decree restitution of vessel and cargo, based on the violation of neutrality.

WERNER HORN LOSES APPEAL.

Supreme Court Decides Case Must Be Decided in Another Jurisdiction.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 6. — The appeal of Werner Horn, the German reservist Lieutenant who attempted to dynamite the international bridge near Vanceboro, Me., in 1915, failed today in the Supreme Court on a technical ruling as to the right of appeal. Horn, when arrested, said that his purpose was to blow up the international bridge at Meadiam, N. B., and therefore he was not amenable to the jurisdiction of an American court.

Horn petitioned to a writ of habeas corpus. The writ was denied by the District Court, and at first an appeal was taken to the Circuit Court of Appeals. Later an appeal was taken direct to the United States Supreme Court. The Supreme Court held that while an appeal was pending to the Circuit Court of Appeals there could be no appeal to the Supreme Court in cases where the measure of damages could not be expressed in money. The merits of Horn's defense were nowhere touched in the opinion which was rendered by Justice Day.

No Letter from Alfonso to Wilson.

MADRID, March 6, (via Paris.)—Count da Romanones, the Spanish Premier, today denied absolutely the report that James W. Gerard, former American Ambassador to Germany, was the bearer of a letter from King Alfonso to President Wilson.

'WILLFUL MEN' DENY AIDING FILIBUSTER

Deeply Moved by Condemnation, Most of Them Assert They Did Not Block a Vote.

BITTER FEELING IN SENATE

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—As the new Senate convened today to begin in earnest the work of its special session the atmosphere of the Capitol both on and off the Senate floor was charged with an aftermath of explanations and defense from the "little group of wilful men" charged with defeating the Armed Ship bill by a filibuster in the closing hours of the Sixty-fourth Congress. Nearly all of them were obviously greatly moved by the wave of indignation at their action which has stirred the country.

Senator Vardaman of Mississippi and Senator Kenyon of Iowa rose on a point of personal privilege to defend their course and to assert that, although opposed to the bill as it stood, they had taken no part in the filibuster and had not attempted to prevent it from coming to a vote. Senator Vardaman engaged in a sharp colloquy with his colleague, John Sharp Williams, over the defeat of the measure.

The real deep-felt bitterness on both sides, however, was displayed only in private conversation in the cloakrooms and offices. Most of the men who refused to sign the manifesto issued by the seventy-seven in favor of the bill said they had refused because they wanted to amend the bill before approving it, and that they had made no attempt to obstruct a vote.

Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin, the man regarded as the moving spirit in the filibuster, refused positively to explain his action. All attempts to get a statement of his position failed, although he let it be known that he might reply later.

Stone Refuses to Reply.

Senator Stone of Missouri, Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, who has shared with Mr. La Follette the largest amount of odium, stood on his previous statement that he had not taken part in the filibuster, and would make no reply to the attacks directed against him from his home State save that he was "not in the habit of engaging in controversies with editors."

Senator Lane of Oregon, one of the Democrats who refused to sign the manifesto, was deeply stirred by the report that a movement was on foot in his home State to recall him. He declared that his position had been misunderstood, that he had not been an obstructionist, that he could not in any sense be classified as a pacifist.

"I would have the bill amended so that we would not be arming ships engaged in carrying munitions of war," he said. "I was therefore averse to voting for it as it stood. I took no time on the floor against it, and I did my best with some of those who opposed it to arrange a compromise which would have permitted it to go through without difficulty.

"I don't regard seriously the report that Oregon might recall me. I believe that when my position is appreciated the people who elected me will support me. The recall movement is started by those who have always been my political enemies, and I feel sure they will not succeed. I want to keep this country out of war, and I know that the people of Oregon and those not feel the same way. I am ready to fight if we have to, but I do not feel that we would be justified in arming merchantmen engaged in war traffic, and I wanted the bill to specify that."

When told that Judson King, Secretary of the National Popular Government League, had expressed the opinion that Oregon's recall law would not apply to United States Senators, Senator Lane said he believed that opinion was correct.

"Even if the recall were possible in my case," he said, "I believe the State would support me. I feel I did only my duty. If I had not, I would want to be recalled. I believe in the principle of the recall."

Senator Lane said he had received a great many telegrams from his constituents, the majority of whom supported his position, although many attacked him.

Vardaman Explains Stand.

Senator Vardaman declared on the floor that he had talked against the bill only sixteen minutes, had never opposed a cloture rule, had never proposed a filibuster, and had always been in favor of the majority rule in the Senate.

"I will not, however," he said, "delegate to the President a trust reposed by the Constitution in Congress. I have no constitutional right to delegate that power. Personally, I do not take orders from any man outside the State of Mississippi. I am in favor of free and ample discussion and an honest vote. I did not sign the manifesto because I am opposed to the bill without the Stone amendment refusing arms to munitions ships, and doubt its propriety.

"It is not my purpose to make an explanation. I prefer to let my actions and my words interpret themselves. But I notice that my name appears as one of the 'little group of willful men' charged with the crime of preventing the President's program from being carried out.'

"My colleague says Congress has some 'rights,'" rejoined Senator Williams, "and I think one of them is to legislate. A filibuster may be rightly used against some things, but when the honor of the nation is at stake and when it renders the Government of the United States helpless and contemptible, as the President says, before the world, it is not excusable. My colleague says he occupied only sixteen minutes. It is also true that the Senator from Wisconsin, Mr. La Follette, did not occupy any time, but it is also true that he was against the bill.

"I don't want this occasion to pass without an opportunity to impress on the people of this country and the world that Congress was in support of the President for the legislation he asked. We were bound, manacled, held helpless and contemptible by these men. Not only Congress, but the great majority of the people of the United States are behind the President in this crisis."

Senator Gronna of North Dakota asked if Senator Williams were sure of that, and Mr. Williams declared he was as sure of it as he was that water if left alone would run down stream.

"The mass of the people today," he declared, "are speaking in tones unmistakable to any one who has ears to hear."

Kenyon Blames Wilson.

Senator Kenyon of Iowa also disclaimed any connection with a filibuster, saying that he had not spoken on the bill at all. He blamed the President for not having come to Congress earlier, saying that had a day or two more been allowed for debate the bill would have been passed without difficulty. He said that he disapproved arming ships carrying munitions and would have voted for the bill had that been guarded against by the adoption of one of the amendments offered.

Senator Cummins, in an interview, said he was willing to vote for arming ships provided they did not carry munitions of war. He declared, however, that as drafted the bill was a declaration of war in disguise.

"I was not, and am not," he said, "ready to declare war, however anxious I may be to give our merchant ships an opportunity to defend themselves against unlawful attack. I believe that Congress alone should determine the question of declaring war, and on that issue I am willing to accept the decision of the American people."

It was impossible to secure a direct admission from any of the group of either party that they had aided in a filibuster. Yet this did not change at all the attitude of utter condemnation with which most of the majority of the Senate in both parties regarded the outcome.

Senator Smoot, a prominent Republican, said that if the bill were now proposed in an extra session all the filibusters in the world could not prevent its passage by an overwhelming majority in a very brief time.

Practically all of the newcomers in the Senate are known to be strongly in favor of the bill as it was approved by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Two of them, Kellogg of Minnesota and Calder of New York, replace Clapp and O'Gorman, who opposed the measure. A third, Hiram Johnson of California, has not reached Washington, but it is understood that he favors the measure. He displaces Works of California, who was one of the opposing group.

SENATOR KELLOGG REBUKES PACIFISTS

Clapp's Successor Rejects Ministers' Plea to Oppose Legislation for Arming Ships.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Frank B. Kellogg, who took the oath of office yesterday as Senator from Minnesota, today sent a sharp letter in reply to communications from four preachers in his State asking him to oppose the Armed Ship bill and to support a referendum on war. The Senator, who succeeds Senator Clapp, an active participant in the filibuster that killed the bill, denied both requests.

Mr. Kellogg's letter, which was addressed to the Rev. F. E. Meierbachtol, Faribault, Minn., is as follows:

"My dear Sir:

"I received your letter, on behalf of yourself, Rev. Meyer, Rev. Zick, and Rev. Horing, all of Faribault, asking that I urge and represent on the floor of the Senate disapproval of delegating to the President power to declare war, and protesting against the protection of American citizens traveling in American or neutral ships carrying contraband of war, or traveling on any ship of any belligerent nation, and asking that I favor an advisory referendum before a declaration of war.

"There has been no proposal made, and there will be none, to authorize the President to declare war, but I shall certainly vote for an armed neutrality bill which authorizes the President to arm merchant ships to protect American lives against unlawful attack by submarines, if such a bill again comes before the Senate. I regret that the bill which was before the Senate at the session of Congress just closed did not pass.

"I will not vote to prevent Americans from traveling upon merchant or passenger ships of belligerent, neutral or American registry, or to close the oceans to American commerce. For more than a hundred years under treaties, international law, and the universal custom of civilized nations, citizens of neutral countries have had the right to travel upon such ships, and before the ships have been destroyed notice is required to be given and the passengers taken off and transferred to a place of safety. I shall never lend my influence to make this great and enlightened democracy the first nation to take the backward step and close the pathways of the oceans at the request of any or all belligerent nations.

"I will not vote for a referendum on the question of war, or to submit to a plebiscite the question of whether this country will protect its citizens. The Constitution of the United States places this power and responsibility of declaring war in Congress. The people of Minnesota elected one of their Senators to vote upon that question, if the unfortunate necessity should arise, and if it does arise, I propose to do it. I will not, of course, do anything I honorably can to prevent involving this country in war, and one of the greatest needs is to immediately make preparations for the defense of the country and the protection of American citizens. That is the highest duty of Government.

"Very respectfully yours,

"FRANK B. KELLOGG."

FIGHT IN LA FOLLETTE'S STATE

Legislature to Vote Today on Resolution Condemning Senator.

Special to The New York Times.

MADISON, Wis., March 6.—A desperate attempt will be made tomorrow in the State Legislature to defeat the Bennett resolution, which notifies Senator La Follette that he has misrepresented the State by his conduct in the Congressional preparedness fight, and that the State demands that he properly represent its loyal American sentiment. There was a report today that the Governor had lined up forces to aid in the defeat of the resolution as an undignified course, though he is himself anti-La Follette and radically pro-American.

Senator Bennett says the resolution will be adopted. Senator Skogmo, La Follette's floor leader, says it will be defeated by a technical ruling. Lieut. Gov. Dithmar, who will preside tomorrow, is violently pro-La Follette and a strong German sympathizer.

BAR DEFENSE OF STONE.

Missouri Senators Object to Implied Indorsement in Resolution.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., March 6.—A resolution pledging support to President Wilson and to Congress in the event of war, but asking that every effort be made to avoid war, was introduced in the Missouri Senate today by Senator Carter.

The resolution charged that munition companies were agitating war and asked that in the event of war munition plants be seized and operated by the Government.

Several Senators objected to the resolution, and it went over, under the rules. Some Senators said the resolution was, in effect, a defense of the attitude of United States Senator Stone.

OREGONIANS DEMAND RESIGNATION OF LANE

Message Calling for This Action Sent to the Senator Who Is Charged with Disgracing State.

Special to The New York Times.

PORTLAND, Ore., March 5.—Determined action was started here today demanding the resignation of United States Senator Harry Lane, who held out with the filibusterers against the Armed Ship bill. The indignation against the Senator is growing and from every county in the State expressions of resentment were received today. Because of President Wilson's known peaceful policy, the refusal of Lane to support the President has aroused a storm of protest.

Some of the Senator's most ardent supporters have turned against him and are among his most severe critics. In view of the deluge of resentment there is reason to believe the political gossip which has been current for months past that Lane does not intend returning to Oregon. It has been rumored that Lane realized long ago that he could not be re-elected and that he had made plans to live in British Columbia or in the Alberta country and go farming.

Signed by many citizens of Oregon, the following message was sent to the Senator:

"We the undersigned voters of the State of Oregon view with shame and humiliation your failure to uphold the honor of the United States at this most critical moment of the entire history of our international relations.

"No words can adequately describe our chagrin that the State of Oregon should be so misrepresented and disgraced as it has been by your action.

"We indignantly protest against this action through the love we bear to our State and to our country, which you have dishonored and belittled before the eyes of the world, and we demand on account of this misrepresentation your resignation as a Senator from this State."

KENTUCKIANS BACK WILSON.

State Senate Calls the Filibusters "Traitorous and Cowardly."

FRANKFORT, Ky., March 6.—The State Senate today passed a resolution condemning the action of United States Senators who prevented a Senate vote last week on the Armed Ship bill.

The preamble recites that "certain un-American, disloyal, unpatriotic, traitorous, and cowardly Senators, namely Clapp, Cummins, Gronna, Kenyon, La Follette, Norris, Works, Kirby, Lane, O'Gorman, Stone and Vardaman," took "advantage of Senatorial courtesy and Senate rules" and "refused to allow said armed neutrality bill to be voted on in the Senate, knowing full well that upon the passage of said measure depended the lives of hundreds of brave American seamen."

It asserts the Senators knew Germany repeatedly had insulted the American flag, torpedoed ships in defiance of international law, and was making earnest efforts to involve the United States into war with Japan; that they knew the United States was swarming with German spies and that bridges and munition plants were being ruthlessly destroyed, "while only inaction was to be uncovered to assassinate our President, destroy our navy yards and naval and military stores, sink our ships, and otherwise humiliate and discredit us among the nations of the earth."

The resolution condemns the "outrageous action" of the Senators named as "unmanly, unpatriotic, un-American, unparalleled, and unwarranted," and commends "the patriotic members of both branches of Congress" who stood with the President in showing that, "while we may have isolated cases of Toryism, as in revolutionary days, we have true sons to our country as were the heroes of the American colonies."

It concludes with a message that "while Kentucky is for peace with honor, she pledges the flower of her manhood as her guarantee that she will help defend the flag and liberty of our great country."

CONDEMNS THE SENATORS.

Colorado Senate Revamps House Resolution, Making It More Severe.

DENVER, March 6.—After revamping a House resolution condemning the eleven Senators who blocked a vote on the Armed Ship bill into stronger terms and passing it, the Colorado Senate late today received another and more condemnatory resolution. It says:

"The people of the United States stand aghast at the action of these Senators. These men deserve the condemnation of the people of the entire nation, and they certainly deserve repudiation by their own constituency. * * * We condemn in the strongest manner possible the action of the following list of the Senators who participated in the alleged filibuster):

OKLAHOMA TAKES ACTION.

Legislature Asserts People Should Resent Action of Senators.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., March 6.—The Oklahoma Legislature today adopted resolutions condemning the United States Senators who defeated President Wilson's Armed Ship bill in the closing hours of the last Congress.

"The action of these Senators in thus defeating the will and purpose of a majority of Congress, and the expressed will of the people," the resolution reads, "rendering the country helpless and contemptible before the eyes of the world, should meet with strong resentment of the people of the United States. Be it resolved, that we condemn the filibustering methods of the United States Senators and their invocation of the rule of unlimited debate in the Senate of the United States to thwart the will of the people."

KANSAS ASKED TO ACT.

Resolution Introduced in State Legislature Condemning the Filibuster.

TOPEKA, Kan., March 6.—Declaring that the filibuster in the United States Senate, led by Senator La Follette and participated in by ten other Senators, against the Armed Ship bill has "placed the American people in a false position before the nations of the earth," a concurrent resolution was introduced in the Kansas Senate today.

The resolution, which will be acted upon tomorrow, further declares that the filibuster has "led the warring powers of Europe to believe that we are a divided nation, and, worst of all, at the most critical moment has given comfort and assistance to William of Germany, the open, inveterate, and barbaric enemy of this Republic."

President Wilson is assured of undivided support of the people of Kansas in his program of dealing with international affairs, Senators Thompson and Curtis are praised for supporting the bill, and urged to "proceed in their course until the rules of the Senate have been amended to accord with the advance of democracy in every other people's legislative assembly on earth." The resolution also demands that the Parliamentary cloture be immediately adopted by the Senate "so that the filibuster may never again be used to humiliate our national honor."

O'GORMAN DEFENDS ACTION.

Denies Part in Filibuster, but Opposed Convoy of Munition Ships.

Ex-Senator James A. O'Gorman, on his return from Washington yesterday to his office at 37 Wall Street, issued the following statement:

"The statement that I participated in the Senate filibuster is entirely unfounded. The Congressional Record will show that I did not occupy five minutes of the Senate's time during the last three days of the session, and that I at no time objected to a vote on the Armed Neutrality resolution. It cannot be said, therefore, with truth that I delayed the progress of the measure.

"When I was requested to sign the so-called manifesto, favoring the adoption of the resolution pending in the Senate, I pointed out that it differed from the resolution previously adopted in the House, in that the Senate measure contained an authorization to the President to employ 'such other instrumentalities and methods as may in his judgment and discretion seem necessary and adequate to,' in addition to the arming of ships. This phrase had been stricken from the bill by a unanimous vote in the House, and I believed that action should be sustained by the Senate.

I stated further that I intended to vote for an amendment which in my judgment would improve the pending resolution and harmonize it with the House action. This amendment, which had been discussed some days before in the committee, prohibited merchant vessels carrying munitions of other war supplies from securing the protection of a convoy. It was generally recognized that to give a merchant vessel carrying such a cargo the protection of an American man-of-war would in itself constitute an act of war. This I was naturally anxious to avoid, and while I had every confidence that the President would not furnish a convoy to a vessel carrying munitions, I believed the insertion of this amendment in the pending resolution would have a reassuring effect throughout the country.

"I had no objection to such vessels being armed. My only objection was to the provision that might be construed so as to afford them the protection of a battleship.

"It was my time intended to vote against the Senate resolution, but desired to secure the amendment above referred to, and for that reason was unwilling to place myself on record a day before the close of the Senate as approving the resolution pending in its then form.

"I repeat I did not participate in the filibuster and that the amendment I favored had the sanction of the action of the House without a dissenting vote."

WHOLE COUNTRY AROUSED.

Security League Flooded with Messages Denouncing Filibuster.

The headquarters of the National Security League, 31 Pine Street, announced yesterday that telegrams from prominent citizens in all parts of the country were being received denouncing the filibuster against the armed ship bill and pledging support to President Wilson in any action he may take. A statement issued by the league reads in part:

"All the messages received are indicative of vigilant patriotism. James G. Cutler, President of the Cutler Realty Company of Rochester, writes that the following telegram has been sent to President Wilson over the signatures of one hundred of the most prominent men in that city: 'I pledge you my loyal support in any immediate action in defense of American rights menaced by Germany, and I urge that such action be taken forthwith.'

"H. O. Dennett, Secretary of the Paterson Branch of the National Security League, writes that Mayor Radcliffe has issued a public proclamation asking the citizens to wire the President and their Representatives and Senators at once expressing their confidence and support.

"Edmund N. Carpenter of Wilkes-Barre, Penn., writes that the Mayor of the city and prominent citizens have telegraphed the President. H. L. Kirk, Mayor of Wheeling, West Va., sends the league the following telegram: 'You may depend upon the loyalty of Wheeling and her citizens. Mass meeting called. Telegrams forwarded to President conveying sentiment of this community.'

"Similar messages and letters have been received by the league from T. L. Kirkpatrick, Mayor of Charlotte, N. C., and from branches of the league in Chicago, St. Louis, Milwaukee, Knoxville, and more than a score of other Southern and Western cities.

"George M. Brown, President of the General Roofing Company of St. Louis, suggests that all the leading bankers, business men, and lawyers of New York communicate at once with their correspondents in the Middle West 'asking them to actively and energetically support the effort we are initiating here to bring pressure to bear on Congress in favor of universal military training.' Steps to carry this suggestion into effect have already been taken."

PRAISE FOR FILIBUSTERS.

Emergency Peace Federation Sends Messages of Gratitude.

Radical pacifists banded in the so-called Emergency Peace Federation of 70 Fifth Avenue, are standing by those Senators who defeated the Armed Ship bill. The federation yesterday sent a letter to the President saying that the group of Senators represented the opinions of the organization and in addition sent a telegram to Senators La Follette, Stone, and Norris expressing "grateful recognition of the courage and devotion with which you have served the cause of peace and democracy."

Another message was sent to Senators Vardaman, Kirby, Gronna, Works, O'Gorman, Clapp, Cummins, and Wesley L. Jones, expressing the belief that "the stand you have taken represents the best wishes of vast numbers of Americans whose earnest desire it is that this country should not be drawn into war."

The federation also issued a statement by Dr. David Starr Jordan, in which he said that even though an American vessel with American citizens on it should be destroyed in the war zone it would not be sufficient reason for "plunging the entire nation into a war which would involve us in disputing such questions as the Pan-Germanic idea of an empire to the Persian Gulf or Russian title to Constantinople. * * * No nation at war can be a true democracy."

To stimulate feeling for "peace at any price" the federation has called a mass meeting, to be held on Friday night at Carnegie Hall. Other meetings will be held in Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, Washington, and Seattle.

In view of the flood of peace appeals of a decided pro-German nature, the federation yesterday disclaimed responsibility for the circulation of such matter.

Tennessee Legislature Protests.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 6.—The Tennessee House today adopted a resolution similar to one adopted yesterday by the Senate, denouncing the filibuster in the national Senate which killed the Armed Ship bill as "contemptible and little short of treason." The resolution urged Congress to support President Wilson.

DENIES COLOMBIA IS ALLY OF GERMANY

WASHINGTON, March 6.—The Colombian Minister, Julio Betancourt, again declared in a statement tonight that persistent cable reports of an alliance between Colombia and Germany, "or any other nation, in order to embroil herself" in the war, are "absolutely false." At the legation it was said that the circulation of the report of a German-Colombian alliance had tended to arouse a widespread distrust of Colombia in Latin America.

"On the contrary," the statement read, "the ardent and vehement desire of any country is to see the end of this unspeakable tragedy. I represent a nation of pacific leanings to the most eminent degree. Colombia has sacrificed a large share of her territorial rights in order to settle old differences with border countries. Inspired by the same ideal, Colombia has endeavored for the last fourteen years to reach an amicable settlement of her differences with the United States, and hopes today for a speedy and satisfactory outcome in accordance with a policy of continental harmony which is the supreme necessity of all the Americas in this perilous moment.

"Colombia wishes that with the establishment of peace we shall contemplate the spectacle of a united people in this world of Columbus, facing the Old World, in order to insure for the future and in a lasting way the rights and prerogatives of the nations of the American continent. To form a continental block for the preservation of peace and prosperity in the Americas should be the desideratum of statesmen in the country of Washington."

any time to shut off debate and prevent dilatory tactics. The committee tomorrow is expected to reach a final agreement on a resolution embodying this proposition. The resolution, added to an existing rule, reads:

Provided, however, that if sixteen Senators present to the Senate at any time a signed motion to bring to a close the debate upon any pending measure, the presiding officer shall at once state the motion to the Senate and at the close of the morning hour on the following calendar day lay the motion before the Senate and direct that the secretary call the roll, and upon the ascertainment that a quorum is present, the Chair shall, without debate, submit to the Senate by an aye-and-nay vote the question:

"Is it the sense of the Senate that the debate shall be brought to a close?

And if that question shall be decided in the affirmative by a two-thirds vote of those voting, then said measure shall be in order to the exclusion of all other business, except a motion to recess or adjourn.

Thereafter no Senator shall be entitled to speak more than one hour on the bill, the amendments thereto, and motions affecting the same, and it shall be the duty of the Chair to keep the time of each Senator who speaks. No dilatory motions shall be in order, and all points of order and appeals from the decision of the Chair shall be decided without debate.

West Demands Recognition.

The Democratic caucus indicated its support of the opinion that rules should be adopted each session. It re-elected Senator Saulsbury of Delaware President pro tempore, although he was elected to that office last session and ordinarily would have held over. It also re-elected other Senate officers who usually hold over.

There were some vigorous speeches in which there were declarations about the prominence the West played in the Democratic success last Fall and the recognition it should receive by the Senate majority. Senator Martin of Virginia was chosen unanimously as majority floor leader.

The Republicans spent most of their time discussing cloture. While most of the thirty-five present were opposed to a rule that would tie the hands of the minority completely, they might be willing. It was plain, to agree to a milder form of restricting debate.

Senator Borah, one of the Republican conferees, pointed out that the rule under consideration was not a cloture rule in the usual sense, and it probably would be seldom invoked, and then only to prevent defeat of legislation by a few men.

Some Republicans said tonight the President could get the Armed Ship bill through the Senate in three days without amending the rules if he would call a special session.

PREDICT EXTRA SESSION.

Will Be Convened Not Later Than June, Officials Believe.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—An extra session of Congress not later than June now is generally conceded among officials here to be assured. Although President Wilson has not given any definite indication that he has finally abandoned his hope that an extra session might be avoided, there is an agreement among Senators, Representatives, and officials of the executive departments that one must be called.

So certain are many members of Congress on this point that they are speculating on the date of the session. The general expectation among them, said to be based on word passed out by officials close to the President, is that the end of May or some time in June will be selected.

The progress made by Senators today toward carrying out the President's recommendation for a rule limiting Senate debate generally is regarded as strengthening the likelihood of a special session. It is pointed out that in his statement Sunday night the President conveyed the impression by implication that such a revision of Senate rules would be a step preliminary to bringing Congress back to finish its program.

War Department Hard Hit.

How the War Department can continue with its preparedness plans is a problem for which officials generally believe an extra session offers the only practicable solution. There have been rumors in Congress that some special arrangement might be made by Treasury officials to avoid calling Congress together by an emergency allotment of funds to the army establishment under executive authority, but so far as has been revealed nothing of the sort has taken definite form.

For lack of the $62,000,000 to have been provided in the General Deficiency bill departments and bureaus all along the line will suffer. Here, too, however, the War Department will be hardest hit, for it had counted on $38,000,000 from the measure, a large part of it to go to pay debts incurred in purchasing equipment for the National Guard on border duty. The navy's share of the bill was more than $7,000,000, asked for to meet miscellaneous items of expense not covered in the regular naval bill.

Another measure that lost out in the race against time at the end of the session was the $1,948,000 Military Academy bill, carrying the regular allotment for maintaining the West Point establishment during the coming fiscal year. Chairman Dent of the House Military Committee declared tonight that unless Congress were called back the Academy would have to close its doors on July 1.

OFFERS PREMIUM ON BONDS.

Germany to Redeem Coming War Issue at 110 to 120 Per Cent.

AMSTERDAM, March 5, (via London.)—A Berlin dispatch says that premium bonds, regarding which there has been considerable controversy in belligerent countries, make their appearance, in a mild form, in the prospectus of the forthcoming German war loan. This loan will be issued in two types: First, the familiar long-term bonds, bearing 5 per cent.; second, 4½ per cent. treasury bills, to which a speculative inducement will be attached in the form of a provision for possible redemption at a small premium by drawings in a few years.

Another new feature of the German loan is the announcement that holders of old loans, subscribing for certain securities into the new loan, must at the same time put in new money equal to at least one-half the amount of their conversions.

The so-called premium bonds are redeemable in groups, beginning Jan. 1, 1918, at 110 per cent. The empire has the right to convert the entire issue in 1927 into 4 per cent. treasury bills, which will be similarly redeemable in groups at 115 per cent. This second issue will be convertible in 1937 into 3½ per cent. treasury bills, redeemable in groups at 120 per cent.

All bills not redeemed by 1967 must be repaid on that date at 110, 115, or 120 per cent., according to whether the government exercised its option of conversion in 1927 and 1937.

The Diversity of Franklin Simon Hand-Tailored Clothes

A young man in this city, a prominent and able merchant, a man of education and refinement, spends thousands of dollars in collecting Chinese porcelains and antiques, those wonderful productions of an age when individual genius was fostered and protected by royal patronage.

His brother wouldn't give four dollars for the Chinese Empire.

We cite the example as typical of the divergence in men's tastes and to emphasize the measures we have taken to meet them.

No man's choice is too severe, nor too extreme, for us to satisfy, always with the qualification, of course, that Franklin Simon woolens and models are designed to conform to the elevated standards which Hand-Tailoring calls for and which Fifth Avenue demands.

GERMANS AT VERDUN UNABLE TO ADVANCE

GUN FIGHTING CONTINUES

British Make More Progress on the Ancre Front—Repulse Teuton Assault.

PARIS, March 6.—The fighting in the region of Caurières Wood and north of Douaumont, northeast of Verdun, continued last night. The Germans made an attempt to drive the French from the trenches the latter recaptured yesterday. The War Office announced this afternoon that this effort failed.

The text of the statement reads:

On the right bank of the Meuse the fighting continued north of Caurières Wood. The Germans attempted to eject us from the new elements of trenches reconquered by us yesterday. All attacks broke down under our fire and counterattacks. Artillery fighting continues in the region north of Douaumont.

Two surprise attacks delivered by us, one south of Lassigny, the other in the sector of Ammertzwiller, (Alsace,) enabled us to take some prisoners. Elsewhere the night was calm.

The official communication issued tonight says:

Between the Oise and the Aisne our fire shattered German organizations northwest of Moulin-sous-Touvent and demolished casemates and shelters north of Autreches.

On the right bank of the Meuse violent artillery actions took place along the entire front of Les Chambrettes-Douaumont. There was no infantry action. The cannonade was intermittent on the rest of the front.

The Belgian communication says:

Our artillery successfully bombarded enemy organizations in the region of Het Sas. A spirited struggle with bombs occurred in the direction of Steenstraete.

LONDON, March 6.—The official report from British Headquarters in France, issued this evening, says:

Last night further progress was made by our troops northwest of Irles and north of Puisieux-au-Mont.

We raided the enemy's trenches east of Bouchavesnes early this morning. Later the enemy was seen massing for a counterattack on the trenches recently captured from him in that area, and was dispersed by our fire.

BERLIN, March 6, (by Wireless to Sayville.)—The German lines east of Bouchavesnes, north of Péronne, on the Somme front, were attacked last night by the British, after violent artillery preparation. The attack was repulsed, Army Headquarters announced today. The text of the statement reads:

On the right bank of the Somme the artillery duel increased to great violence toward evening. After drumfire the British attacked again east of Bouchavesnes. The attack was repulsed. A further attack was frustrated by our annihilating fire.

In the sectors of the front the firing activity was for the most part of a limited nature during the blizzard that prevailed. Reconnoitring parties which reached the line of French positions in Caurières Wood, opposite the lines gained there by us, brought in fifteen prisoners.

The weather being bright, fighting activity at many places on the front increased, as compared with the preceding day. North of the Somme the British, after a strong fire, attacked the village of St. Pierre Vaast Forest. After a violent struggle one trench section on the road from Bouchavesnes to Moislains (north of Péronne) remained in their hands; otherwise they were repulsed.

On the east bank of the Meuse our troops took French positions on the Caurières Wood about 1,500 meters in breadth and repulsed counterattacks delivered at night. Also on the southeast edge of the Fosses Forest an important portion of terrain was captured from the French. In addition to sanguinary losses, which were recorded by our reconnoitring troops advancing beyond the lines gained, the enemy lost 6 officers and 372 other ranks as prisoners, 10 machine guns, and 25 quick firers.

In the very numerous air engagements yesterday our enemies lost eighteen airplanes, and one was shot down from the ground. Our loss was four airplanes.

GERMANS STILL RETIRING.

Have Abandoned Biez Wood, West of Bapaume, and Other Positions.

By PHILIP GIBBS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, March 5, (Dispatch to the London Daily Chronicle.)—A sharp fall of snow during the night whitened all the battlefields again, and the thaw which came with the sun made conditions on the roads bad for the Germans as well as for the British.

To the Germans the bad weather was probably an advantage on a balance with the difficulties it created, for their main object for the next few weeks is to gain time and retard the British pursuit through the quagmires and broken tracts. The hard frost helped them to move their guns back, but delayed their work behind the lines, owing to the freezing of waterways upon which they depended a great deal for their transport of supplies. Thaws, fogs, and storms are conspirators with them in their policy of retirement from the great salient below Arras. That retirement continues slowly and is spreading north of the ground by Gommecourt, which until two days ago was the limit of the movement. Rossignol (or Nightingale) trench and wood fell into British hands, after some sharp fighting with German outposts, day before yesterday, and British patrols discovered that Biez Wood was abandoned. The Germans are therefore right back on the Essarts-Bucquoy-Loupard Wood line of defense in front of Bapaume.

The next problem in front of the British is to discover whether the Germans intend to defend this line with any great resistance or whether they will soak up their traps there in due time and get further back until they are quite clear of the salient and so shorten their line by something like thirty miles. It is still doubtful whether they will challenge the British with what chess players call the "grand jeu," the really great strategical game, or whether they are merely saving pawns. In my opinion, which counts for nothing, they are about to play the grand jeu and take great risks for great hopes.

Behind Bapaume there is a further indication of what might be called Spring flitting. Fires are burning in villages although they were setting light to useless stores, and civilians are being sent away from their homes. There seems to be abnormal railway activity on their lines, but these signs are uncertain and may be to hide plans at which the British can only guess, tricks to lure them on incautiously so that the Germans may come back at them with a great spring.

It is clear that the German staff is not revealing anything to their soldiers.

I have already said that the men taken north and south of the actual line of retirement know nothing of this and are amazed to hear the news. This is confirmed again this morning north of Arras, where seventy-eight men were captured, and southeast of Arras, where twenty-one were brought back. They found it hard to believe that the line south of them was crumbling away. Not a word has reached them. So it was with the bigger batch of prisoners taken two days ago near Bouchavesnes.

JAPANESE REMAND THAYER FOR TRIAL

Former Utica Man, Accused of Trespassing on Naval Preserve, Let Out on Bail.

TOKIO, March 6.—Ralph Hoyt Thayer, formerly of Utica, N. Y., who was arrested recently on the charge of violating the law for protection of military secrets, has been remanded for trial and released under bond of 600 yen. ($300.) He is charged with having entered without authority the wireless station zone of Yokosuka, an important naval station three miles southwest of Yokohama.

TOKIO, Feb. 2, (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—The case of Ralph Hoyt Thayer is attracting considerable attention in Japan. He has been imprisoned in the Yokohama jail, daily undergoing a secret examination at the hands of a preliminary Magistrate.

The judicial authorities refuse to make any statement except that Thayer was arrested at Yokosuka three nights after the explosion of the battleship-cruiser Tsukuba at that port, and he was at once taken into custody for entering a fortified zone without authority. Thayer was a teacher of English in St. Paul's Episcopal College at Tokio, an institution conducted by the American Episcopal Mission.

The Episcopal Mission appointed a committee to look after the interests of Thayer, who informed the American Vice Consul at Yokohama that he wished for nothing and was receiving the best treatment from Japanese police. His friends express the opinion that he was interested in the education and conversion of Japanese sailors, and that he visited Yokosuka merely to inquire whether any of his acquaintances had been killed in the explosion.

Naval officers have been quoted as saying that Thayer was not arrested in connection with the Tsukuba explosion as alleged by Japanese newspapers.

R. Brimfield and C. Dresser of Kobe, employes there of the American Trading Company, who were arrested for possessing wireless telegraphy installations, which loves liberty and independence as much as mine, will always find my people its all-powerful support, sympathy, solidarity, and comfort, like a big, strong brother toward a younger and weaker one.

"Against the horrible iniquity of this war, to quote an expression of your great Roosevelt, the American Nation from the beginning has risen with all the fervor of which its heroic soul and its generous blood are capable, since the message of President Wilson to the Senate on the historic day of Jan. 22 the entire nation has become our ally —the greatest ally of our holy cause of human liberty.

"As chief of the smallest of its new European allies, as sovereign of the nation which has been the most oppressed and ill-treated by the barbaric injustice of the enemy, I am happy to express herewith my most ardent sympathy and gratitude of the triumph of immortal justice to the great nation of George Washington."

POTATOES SCARCE IN PARIS.

Society Women Issue Appeal to Till Parks and Gardens.

PARIS, March 6.—The potato, like sugar, butter, and other things, is becoming increasingly scarce here. In fact, at Le Shalle's great Central Market today no old potatoes were to be had. New potatoes from Algeria were to be found at some groceries. They brought 15 cents a pound.

Senator Edouard Herriot, Minister of National Subsistence and Labor, succeeded recently in unearthing a large quantity of butter in the provinces and sending it to Paris when the supply failed. He is taking energetic measures likewise to remedy the shortage of potatoes.

A group of society women, headed by the Duchesses d'Uzes, de Noailles, and de Luynes, Countess de Galard, and Mme. Waldeck-Rousseau, has sent to all women who own parks or gardens in France an appeal which concludes:

"Do not let a spot of ground be unused. Let us cultivate all our pleasure grounds so that they can become of more serious use. Perhaps we shall provoke some smiles when the flowers in the garden or the grass on the lawn is seen to be replaced by potatoes and cauliflower. Do not mind that."

MAY AID JEWISH REFUGEES.

Americans Again Permitted to Remit to Lands Under German Sway.

Albert Lucas, Secretary of the Joint Distribution Committee on Jewish War Relief, made this announcement yesterday:

"The Joint Distribution Committee has succeeded in making new arrangements whereby it is again possible to forward individual remittances from relatives and friends in this country to persons in the territory occupied by Germany and her allies. The countries affected by this new arrangement are Austria, Poland under German dominion, Rumania under German dominion, and Palestine."

Mr. Lucas, who returned from Washington yesterday, said that the State Department had just received a belated cable dispatch, dated Feb. 20, from Ambassador Elkus, saying that the thousand or more American refugees who had been reported awaiting the arrival of the cruiser Des Moines and the collier Caesar at Beirut had been warned by him in time that the American vessels were held at Alexandria, and had not gone to Beirut.

RAIDS ON RUSSIAN FRONT.

Germans Report Repulse of Night Attack Near Brzezany, Galicia.

PETROGRAD, March 6, (British Admiralty per Wireless Press.)—Today's report from the War Office says:

On the Russo-Galician and Rumanian fronts scouting reconnoissances and exchanges of fire are proceeding.

On Sunday one of our airships, notwithstanding German battleplane attacks, flew over Baranovichi, dropping bombs. In the neighborhood of the Volchek station on the Sarny-Kovel way a German airplane, brought down by a Russian aviator, caught fire. The aviators were captured.

BERLIN, March 6, (by Wireless to Sayville.)—The repulse of a night attack by the Russians on the Austro-German lines south of Brzezany, in Galicia, is announced in today's Army Headquarters report. The statement reads:

Front of Archduke Joseph: East of Sascpen, in the Kelemen Mountains, in the southern part of the wooded Carpathians, several Russian companies which attacked our positions after a lively fire were repulsed.

MESSAGE TO AMERICA BY KING NICHOLAS

Montenegrin Monarch Sends Heartfelt Greetings Through The New York Times.

LAUDS PRESIDENT'S STAND

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, March 6.—King Nicholas of Montenegro, descendant of the ancient dynasty of Peterovitch of Niegous, which for centuries victoriously resisted Turkish invasion, received today Eugene Berrgland, on behalf of THE NEW YORK TIMES, in his villa at Neuilly, in the outskirts of Paris, where the King is residing with his daughter, Princess Xenia, and his Court. His Majesty sent the following message to the American people:

"At the moment when the great struggle against the common enemy is about to result in all its fury, it is a great pleasure for me to send through THE NEW YORK TIMES my heartfelt greetings to the great nation of the United States and to recall to this generous people the sufferings which my small nation is bearing in silence, my personal grief at my inability to relieve them from a distance, and the ardent faith I preserve, despite all, in the speedy resurrection of my country and its reconstitution into an independent free State.

"To preserve this freedom and independence, which my ancestors defended for five centuries, I have devoted joyfully all my strength and efforts and the last years of my old age. I have confidence that God will not allow victory to desert us to crown the diabolic work of our powerful enemies. I cannot say how greatly my hope and faith in the final triumph of justice revived the day when the President of the greatest republic of the world declared by a message to neutrals the necessity of a new juridical organization of the nations guaranteeing them peace and the right of existence for all time.

"The great allied powers, in reply to President Wilson, did not forget their solemn promise to my beloved people of Montenegro, which was always first to give the signal of attack against every enemy, yesterday as today. Let me hope in this hour which is so painful to me that your great nation, which loves liberty and independence as much as mine, will always lend my people its all-powerful support, sympathy, solidarity, and comfort, like a big, strong brother toward a younger and weaker one.

"Against the horrible iniquity of this war, to quote an expression of your great Roosevelt, the American Nation from the beginning has risen with all the fervor of which its heroic soul and its generous blood are capable, since the message of President Wilson to the Senate on the historic day of Jan. 22 the entire nation has become our ally —the greatest ally of our holy cause of human liberty.

"As chief of the smallest of its new European allies, as sovereign of the nation which has been the most oppressed and ill-treated by the barbaric injustice of the enemy, I am happy to express herewith my most ardent sympathy and gratitude of the triumph of immortal justice to the great nation of George Washington."

SOUTHERN PACIFIC UPHELD.

May Retain New York Steamship Line if It Corrects Methods.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—The Interstate Commerce Commission, in a decision handed down today, indicated that the Southern Pacific Company may retain possession of its steamship lines between New York and New Orleans and New York and Galveston, if the company corrects within sixty days certain objectionable practices at present in force.

Under the Panama Canal law the railroad company would have to dispose of its steamers unless the commission found that railroad ownership did not tend to reduce competition by water and that such ownership was in public interest.

The commission's decision today finds that the railroad's control of the steamship lines does not tend to reduce competition in this instance, but that there is on the contrary active competition for transcontinental freight between the steamship lines and the railroad lines of the Southern Pacific.

The correction of objectionable practices, the decision says, should have no basis of record to justify the withholding of the requisite finding, under the act, that the existing service of these steamship lines between New York and New Orleans and New York and Galveston is in the interest of the public and of advantage to the convenience and commerce of the people.

The case will be held open sixty days, during which time the petitioner will have an opportunity to readjust the practices in question so as to bring the service into full conformity with the provisions of the act to regulate commerce, as amended. At the expiration of that time the commission will determine what final action should be taken."

The chief practice referred to as objectionable is the method of billing from New York to Galveston and rebilling at Galveston to points West.

BRITISH POISON PLOT TRIAL.

LONDON, March 6.—The trial of the four persons charged with conspiring to murder Premier David Lloyd George and Arthur Henderson, labor member of the War Council, began today at the Old Bailey before Justice Low.

The defendants, who were held for trial after a hearing at Derby last month as a result of the exposure of the poison conspiracy in which they were alleged to be engaged, are Mrs. Alice Wheeldon and her two daughters, Miss Ann Wheeldon and Mrs. Alfred George Mason, and Mrs. Mason's husband.

The case was prosecuted by Attorney General Frederick E. Smith, with whom were associated Hugo Young and A. H. Bodkin. The defendants were represented by S. H. Rizs.

18 ALLIED AIRPLANES DOWNED, SAYS BERLIN

British Machines Raid Brebuch While French Attack Freiburg and Varesnes.

BERLIN, Monday, March 5, (by Wireless to Tuckerton, March 6.)—Eighteen hostile airplanes were shot down by the Germans on Sunday, says an Overseas News Agency review of recent operations, issued today. Twelve of these machines were accounted for north of the Somme and in the Arras region, and the others at isolated points.

On the Russian front a successful German airplane raid on the railroad station at Moledechno, southeast of Vilna, is reported, while in Macedonia a German air squadron attacked ammunition sheds north of Saloniki. The agency report says several fires and explosions were observed.

An Entente attack on a German aviation park in this region, delivered by twelve airplanes, is declared to have been unsuccessful.

LONDON, March 6.—"Naval airplanes dropped many heavy bombs on blast furnaces at Brebach, (in the Saarbrücken district of Rhenish Prussia,) on Sunday," says an official statement issued today. "All the airplanes returned safely."

PARIS, March 6.—The War Office issued the following statement today under the heading of "Aviation":

"It is confirmed that one of our pilots brought down a German aviator on March 4 in the region of Ornes.

"A group of British naval aviators bombarded railroad stations at Brebach, southeast of Saarbrücken and Stawold, southwest of Saarbrücken. Forty bombs were dropped, most of them hitting their mark.

"On the night of March 4-5 one of our machines dropped projectiles on the railroad station and military establishments at Freibourg-im-Breisgau, another upon the factories at Kehl, near Strasbourg.

"On the night of March 5-6 one of our squadrons dropped 8,120 kilos of projectiles on the aviation field at Varesnes on the Oise, doing important damage to the hangars."

Vossische Zeitung Cites Roland G. Usher's Book as Proof.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, March 6, (via London.)—To prove that the United States has an alliance with England of some years' standing the Vossische Zeitung today quotes as follows from Roland G. Usher's book, published in March, 1913, by the Century Company:

"The true policy of the United States would then without question lie in a firm alliance with the sea power, which in its own interest would right our defensive battles and in exchange for our economic assistance further our legitimate ambition in South America and the Far East. Such an understanding the United States already possesses with England, and by virtue of it we are supreme in the western hemisphere, owners of the Panama Canal, possessors of the Philippines, and exert great influence in Latin-American affairs."

The Vossische Zeitung merely remarks that in the preface to his book Professor Usher emphasizes his strict impartiality, and it urges that his work must be regarded as a historic representation of the political situation of the present war, which thus admits an Anglo-American alliance.

Only yesterday the Lokal-Anzeiger said that President Wilson was one of the first men who correctly judged the fact of the intensified U-boat war, and did everything to spare England this "fatal ordeal," and added that "knowing he can no longer prevent it, he prepares to plunge his country into the awful war." The paper adds:

"Is the game worth the candle? Our U-boats will prove that there is no longer any English fleet to support American interests, if necessary."

BRITISH SHIP ESCAPES FROM U-BOAT ATTACK

BOSTON, March 6.—A running fight in the English Channel on Jan. 31 between a German submarine and the British steamer Foyle in which 50 shots were exchanged, two of which struck the steamer, was described by Captain James Evans upon the arrival of the Foyle here today from Liverpool. The engagement took place while the Foyle was on a voyage from Liverpool, where she had discharged a cargo from Portland, Me.

Captain Evans said the vessel was just turning into the channel when she sighted a ship afire a couple of miles ahead. Upon hearing shots fired at the burning vessel, Captain Evans changed the Foyle's course and increased her speed. The submarine sighted her, however, and began firing at long range.

One shot from the submarine tore a hole through the upper deck of the Foyle and another struck on the port side, grazing the bridge and scattering fragments at the captain's feet. The Foyle, which carries a 4.7 gun mounted aft, returned the fire and the chase continued for more than two hours. The submarine finally abandoned it and submerged, but the crew of the Foyle was unable to determine whether any of their shots took effect.

GERMAN AND HINDU HELD HERE IN PLOT

submitted at once to Assistant United States Attorney John C. Knox, who drew up a complaint, which he had Detective Barnitz sign, formally accusing the prisoners of having begun a military enterprise in the United States against Great Britain.

The filing of this complaint with United States Commissioner Samuel M. Hitchcock, made public for the first time the seriousness of the offense with which the men are charged. Commissioner Hitchcock considered the case so serious that he fixed bail for each man in the sum of $25,000, which the prisoners, after a plea that they were unable to retain counsel, promptly furnished. In a safety box in a downtown bank, held in the name of Chakraberty, the police found cash and securities to the value of $30,000.

The complaint states that the prisoners, together with other unnamed persons, plotted in New York to start insurrections and rebellions in India to suppress which it would be necessary for Great Britain to employ great bodies of troops, which in the event India remained at peace, would be used against Germany on the battlefields of Europe, and that with this object in view the conspirators purchased a house in New York for use as a headquarters for the fomentation and carrying out of the plans and purposes of the conspiracy and that to further effect their object they sent from New York a certain Chinaman named Chin whose instructions were to import the arms and ammunition necessary to the success of the proposed uprising.

The men were arraigned before Commissioner Houghton late yesterday afternoon. They came into the court room flanked by Secret Service agents and both had the appearance of men suffering from fright. The German towered at least two feet above the little Hindu.

Held in $25,000 Bail.

Commissioner Hitchcock briefly outlined to them their rights under the law and asked them if they were able to employ counsel. Both said they were not in a position to get counsel, whereupon the Commissioner appointed Ex-Assistant United States Attorney Charles H. Griffith to look after their interests.

When Commissioner Hitchcock asked the men if they desired an immediate hearing both answered that they did, whereupon the Commissioner, ignoring the request, set the formal hearing on the complaint for next Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

"Have you anything to say, Mr. Knox?" Commissioner Hitchcock said, turning to the Assistant United States Attorney.

"Yes Sir, I would ask that bail be fixed at $25,000 for each man," Mr. Knox replied.

"I do not consider that excessive in such a case as this," said the Commissioner.

After the hearing the prisoners remained in the court room for about two hours while bail was sought. In that interval Dr. Se Kunna made a brief statement to the newspapermen present.

"I have done nothing unneutral," he said, "any my only activities have been to have certain pamphlets printed telling the truth about the war as carried on by Great Britain. And I am worried about the jury."

"What boy?" he was asked.

"The boy Chandra," he replied, patting the Hindu on the back.

The Hindu made no statement.

Met in American University.

The Chinaman, named in the complaint as one Chin, is said to have been a student at an American university, at which institution Chakraberty is understood to have made his acquaintance. No information concerning the Chinaman was given out yesterday except that he is "an unusually bright Oriental."

As for the Hindu Jodh Singh, who, according to Chakraberty, is now in Berlin, there is reason to believe that he is a Hindu who before the war lived for a time in Chicago, where he was known as Prince Sida. While in Chicago the Prince was much in the company, with certain German agents, one of whom is reported to have been recently captured in Calcutta by the British authorities.

The name of this German is said to have been Bohm, and his capture in Calcutta followed the capture in the Bay of Bengal of a schooner on board of which the British found a score of Indian plotters, all believed to have been identified with conspiracies hatched in the United States. At least a dozen of these plotters are said to have been executed for their part in the plan. The expedition of which these men were a part was fitted out at Manila, and the ship, a sailer, on which they set out for India, was called the Harry S. Whether or not this expedition was a part of the conspiracy of which Chakraberty and Se Kunna are among the alleged principals was not learned last night.

A high Federal official was asked late last night if any more arrests were to be made in the near future.

"Probably, but not tonight," he replied.

The same official said that important documents bearing on the case were in possession of the Government in Washington. These papers and documents, it is said, will be brought to New York by a special messenger today.

KNEW ACCUSED AT COLUMBIA.

Chakraberty and Se Kunna Were Active in the Cosmopolitan Club.

Dr. Chandra Chakraberty and Dr. Ernest Se Kunna formerly were members of the Cosmopolitan Club of Columbia University, a student organization since reorganized, and took an active part in its proceedings, according to Thomas Hughes of 976 East Thirteenth Street, Brooklyn, its former Secretary. They generally attended its sessions together and invariably attracted attention. Dr. Chakraberty always wore a cutaway coat when addressing the club. His shrill tones contrasted sharply with the voice of Dr. Se Kunna.

"Both were members of the club when I became its Secretary three years ago," said Mr. Hughes, last night, "and it was rather amusing to see them together. They took a prominent part in discussions. Practically all the students knew them, and they were considered rather odd. Both called themselves 'Dr.,' but I do not remember having heard where they got their degrees. My impression was that Dr. Chakraberty had received his at the university."

Another former member of the club who knew Dr. Chakraberty and Dr. Se Kunna is now a pathological chemist at St. Luke's Hospital.

"I knew them well, and gained the impression that both were anxious to get rich quickly," this man said. "I understood they both made a comfortable living by marketing a patent medicine. I do not know where they got their titles. Although Dr. Se Kunna introduced himself as a chemist, he seemed to know very little about chemistry."

FRITZ KOLB'S ASSOCIATE CONFESSES BOMB PLOTS

Schwartz Says They Planned to Blow up Black Tom Again, as Well as Ships and Lighters.

Evidence that Fritz Kolb, the German who was arrested on Monday in Hoboken, was engaged in plots to destroy munition plants and ships was obtained when Hans Schwartz, a young German, said to be an accomplice of Kolb, was arrested in a room at 113 Hudson Street, Hoboken, early yesterday morning. According to the police and Secret Service men, Schwartz signed a long confession in which he said, among other things, that a plan had been devised by Kolb and himself to repeat the Black Tom munitions explosion on March 8.

Much information which he gave was withheld, but it was said he admitted that a defect in the fuses of the bombs was all that prevented the plans from being carried out. It was understood that the bombs found in Kolb's room in the Commercial Hotel, Hoboken, when the police raided it on Monday, were the ones which they had intended to use.

Several freight cars filled with ammunition, seven lighters lying at the Hoboken piers, some loaded and other partly loaded with munitions for delivery to freight steamers and a French and an English ship, had been picked out also for destruction, according to the confession. The police say Schwartz denied that he had had any part in the earlier explosion at Black Tom or in the one in the Canadian Car and Foundry Company's plant at Kingsland, N. J.

Kolb was identified at Hoboken Police Headquarters early in the afternoon by Thomas Steele, a negro, as one of the employes in the machine shop at the Canadian Car and Foundry works at the time of the explosion there on Jan. 11. Steele offered his services to the police after recognizing a picture of Kolb in a newspaper.

"There were twenty-eight of us employed in the machine shop in the company's plant at Kingsland, the shop where the first explosion occurred," Steele told the police. "One of the men, who had been there but a short time, said that he was a reservist from Austria. He was very clever with tools. The only man missing after the explosion was the Austrian. He never came back for his wages."

The photographs of other men who had worked in the machine shop at Kingsland were obtained, and Steele identified them without trouble. The police have sent for several of these men, and they will be asked to see if they can identify Kolb. Later in the afternoon Chief of Police O'Brien, Police Commissioner Tenney and Detective Woods of Edgewater, N. J., identified Kolb as a man they had been watching in Edgewater about five weeks ago. They said he was seen on several occasions loitering about the ammunition plants and the Post Office. Kolb refused to make further statements after Schwartz confessed, but sat sullenly in his cell. He has denied that he had any part in the Kingsland explosion, and in this he has been backed up by Theodore Kempner, a saloonkeeper of Newark, for whom he was reported to have worked as a bartender. Kempner told the police that Kolb was in Newark at the time of the explosion.

The Chicago police asked Chief Hayes of Hoboken yesterday to determine whether either Kolb or Schwartz might be Jean Crones, the man wanted for poisoning many persons at a dinner in Chicago last year. Chief Hayes sent word that neither prisoner was the man wanted.

Tried to Join the Mexicans.

MEXICO CITY, March 6.—Inquiry here today concerning Fritz Kolb revealed that a man of that name arrived in Vera Cruz in 1914, when the Constitutionalist Army, headed by General Carranza, made its headquarters there. According to General Juan Merigo, who commanded an artillery corps of the Constitutionalist Army, Kolb bore a passport signed by Count von Bernstorff. He said he was a German reservist and had recently been in South America.

General Merigo says the man claimed to be a machine gun operator and tried to join his corps, but permission for him to do so was refused. Later the man came to Mexico City and tried again to join the army, but without success. General Merigo says he believes Kolb then went north, probably to the Tampico oil fields.

PRISON FOR TWO SUSPECTS.

Men Caught Climbing Standard Oil Co.'s Fence Get Six Months Each.

Two young men carrying I. W. W. literature were arrested yesterday at Bayonne just after they had climbed a fence on the property of the Standard Oil Company. During the international crisis the guards at the plant have been increased, and one of these saw the pair getting over the fence and arrested them on a charge of disorderly conduct. The prisoners said they were Alfred Martin and George Olich of 119 Charlton Street, New York City.

When taken before him, City Recorder William J. Cain questioned them closely. They said they had come to Bayonne to try and ship on a Standard Oil steamer and denied any other intent in visiting the company's plant. Recorder Cain sentenced each to six months in the county jail.

CALL ON BUILDERS TO RUSH WARSHIPS

Daniels, at Conference, Tells Them Construction Time Must Be Cut in Half.

GOMPERS PLEDGES LABOR

TRADING CRAFT MUST WAIT

All Plants to Devote Energies to Completion of Great Naval Program.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—President Wilson and Secretary Daniels today began their campaign for the speeding up of warship construction. Armed with the authority given by Congress in the newly enacted naval appropriation law the Administration will utilize to the fullest extent necessary the private and Government shipbuilding facilities of the nation, and, if necessary, will commandeer every plant needed to complete its naval preparedness plans quickly.

The Naval Appropriation bill, as finally approved, carries specific appropriations amounting to $317,339,441.08, the largest sum devoted in any single year to the naval establishment, and every penny of it has been made immediately available. How to spend this money wisely and expeditiously is the hardest problem, it was admitted today, that the Navy Department has ever been called upon to solve, in view of the limited shipbuilding facilities of the country, and the conditions now existing in the labor and material markets.

Secretary Daniels this morning conferred with the leading shipbuilding companies, whose representatives he had called to Washington, to obtain from them information on which to base an immediate survey of the situation. He explained what was wanted, and asked what they could do toward aiding the Government. They will have another conference with him tomorrow morning.

After conferring with the shipbuilders Mr. Daniels referred them to Rear Admiral David W. Taylor, Chief of the Bureau of Construction, and to Rear Admiral Robert S. Griffin, Chief of the Bureau of Steam Engineering, from whom they learned in greater detail the needs of the navy.

Receives Visit From President.

Secretary Daniels this afternoon had a visit from President Wilson, who called for a consultation over several pressing programs, one of which was the arming of American merchant ships and another the speeding up of naval construction.

Following the departure of the President further conferences were held by Secretary Daniels with Secretary Wilson of the Department of Labor and Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, who is also a member of the Advisory Commission of the Council of National Defense. Assurances were given by Mr. Gompers that further aid could be counted upon to do its part.

Secretary Daniels in his interview with the labor leaders told them that the Government expected their co-operation, and was counting upon it to the fullest possible extent, but that if such co-operation could not be obtained the Government would not, in this emergency, hesitate to commandeer shipyards. He almost took the breath away from some of his hearers when he told them the Government was now desirous of having some of the new submarines built within nine months. The best building time that had been offered previously was eighteen months. Mr. Daniels also indicated that the Government was anxious to have destroyers built within a year. Instead of two years, the best time previously offered.

"I am consulting," said Mr. Daniels tonight, "with private shipbuilders, whose plants have the largest capacity, with reference to contracts for dreadnoughts, battle cruisers, scout cruisers, submarines, and other ships appropriated for in the bill. Some of them have already indicated that they will be ready to meet the department in any way to expedite the building program. It is believed that all of them will do so.

"The Navy bill provides the initial appropriations for the following vessels of the three-year program adopted by the first session of the Sixty-fourth Congress, which authorized the construction of 156 vessels of different types: 3 battleships, 1 battle cruiser, 3 scout cruisers, 15 destroyers, 18 submarines, 1 destroyer tender, and 1 submarine tender.

Big Program to be Pushed Through.

"Of the three-year program, therefore, the money has been provided in this bill and in the former bill to commence the construction of the following vessels: Seven battleships, 5 battle cruisers, 7 scout cruisers, 35 destroyers, 48 submarines, 1 destroyer tender, 1 submarine tender, 1 hospital ship, 1 fuel ship, 1 ammunition ship, 1 gunboat, leaving to be first appropriated for next year the balance of the three-year program, consisting of 3 battleships, 1 battle cruiser, 3 scout cruisers, 15 destroyers, 19 submarines, 2 fuel ships, 1 repair ship, 1 transport, 1 destroyer tender, 1 ammunition ship, and 1 gunboat.

"The outstanding features of the bill are, first, the $115,000,000 appropriation for speeding up the construction of ships already authorized and authorized in the bill just approved, and the purchase or construction of aircraft, additional destroyers, submarine chasers, motor boats, and other small craft, which will be essential in an emergency, and which can be constructed in a comparatively short time. A further emergency appropriation of $16,000,000 is provided specifically for the construction of twenty coast submarines in addition to the eighteen submarines for which money is provided in the bill of the three-year program, making thirty-eight submarines specifically appropriated for in this bill.

"The necessity to secure quick construction may require the delay of merchant craft. In an emergency like the present the needs of the Government are paramount, and all Government yards and those private yards constructing naval vessels must have the first call upon skilled labor and material to construct the naval craft authorized as speedily as possible.

"National preparedness will lay a heavy contribution upon the country, but there will be a ready response, I feel sure, and as profits no larger than those paid in foreign countries, which have had to make like demands upon builders and contractors. We need not fear the generous appropriations of Congress will be followed by excessive prices either for labor or material."

SUES MAID FOR ACCOUNTING

Mrs. Burnett Says Servant Demands $12,228 for Loans and Wages.

Mrs. Agnes S. Tailer Burnett, widow of General Henry L. Burnett, at one time United States Attorney in this city, who died in January, 1916, has brought suit in the Supreme Court against Julia Mulligan King of 310 East Fifty-eighth Street, formerly employed as a servant by Mrs. Burnett, for an accounting of all the sums paid her for wages and for loans.

In her complaint filed yesterday Mrs. Burnett sets forth that for ten years she borrowed money from Mrs. King, who, though employed as a servant, had amassed considerable means, and gave her promissory notes for the loans and for the servant's wages. Mrs. Burnett said she was forced to sue for an accounting because her former servant had threatened to bring an action against her for a note for $12,228 which she made on Jan. 8, 1914, and which fell due on Jan. 8 of this year.

Mrs. King, she adds, was in her employ between 1902 and 1912, and received $30 a month from General Burnett. The plaintiff asserts that she was to pay that amount $20 a month in addition. According to the complaint, when Mrs. King left Mrs. Burnett's employ she induced the plaintiff to give her a note for the sum the servant alleged was due, which Mrs. Burnett said she believed included an illegal rate of interest.

The plaintiff alleged that she was induced to execute the present note for $12,228 on the defendant's representations that she would not compel her to make payment so long as the plaintiff's mother, Mrs. Tailer, was alive, and she is still alive. Mrs. Burnett alleged that she was an invalid during the period when the defendant was in her employ, and was not able to make a careful examination of the amounts the defendant alleged were due. The plaintiff said she made payments to the servant in the last five years, but kept no account of them.

Drake Sale Yields $4,575 to Date.

Old American, Stiegel, and Dutch glass was sold at the second afternoon of the Alexander W. Drake sale at the American Art Galleries yesterday, the returns for the day, $1,927, bringing the total to date to $4,575. Two Stiegel glass salt cellars, Venetian diamond pattern, one blue and one green, went to A. J. Tiffin for $60. A carafe of a brilliant violet shade went to A. P. L. Dull for $30, and Rudert, agent, paid $35 for a pair of very rare royal blue carafes. Mrs. C. C. Nelson bought a large decorative Spanish bottle of teal bottle shape, beautiful in color and texture, for $20, and a Scotch glass vase, with five applied seals of glass, went to Dull for $25.

WARM GREETING FOR THE 12TH AND 69TH

BOTH ARRIVE HOURS LATE

The Twelfth and Sixty-ninth Regiments, last complete units of New York's National Guard to leave the Mexican border, reached home yesterday afternoon. With faces bronzed after eight months' service and their uniforms the color of Texas dust they paraded, one regiment up and the other down Fifth Avenue, with shoulders erect and with the stride of athletes. A crowd of cheering spectators lined the sidewalks eight deep on both sides of the avenue and filled the windows of hotels, clubs and stores.

The Twelfth was the first to reach Jersey City, arriving on the Pennsylvania at noon. Wives, mothers, sisters, and young women who were neither waited for hours at the station in Jersey City and Communipaw for the trains to arrive from Washington, where the men had marched in the inauguration parade on Monday. It had been expected that the first sections would arrive as early as 6 A. M., but traffic conditions due to inauguration crowds delayed their arrival several hours. The delay, however, did not decrease the enthusiasm of those who waited, and to the accompaniment of hearty cheers the men finally stepped from their trains. For a while the arduous task of unloading horses, machine guns and heavy equipment was ignored while hundreds of individual reunions were in progress.

Welcomed at the Ferry.

Both regiments came across on ferries to West Twenty-third Street, Manhattan, the Twelfth arriving about 3 P. M. and the Sixty-ninth at 4:30. Here they received another rousing welcome. They were met by their depot battalions and Spanish war veterans. The Sixty-ninth was met and escorted by the Seventh Regiment, as a return compliment to the Sixty-ninth, which escorted the Seventh when the latter left the border. There were brass bands galore, including the Subway Band of the Interborough, which met the Twelfth to welcome home a large number of Interborough employes in that regiment.

The Twelfth, led by Lieut. Col. Foster and preceded by mounted policemen, marched east on Twenty-third Street to Fifth Avenue, and thence north to Fifty-seventh Street, then to Broadway and to the armory at Columbus Avenue and Sixty-second Street. A detachment of cavalry from Squadron A, which went to Washington as Governor Whitman's escort at the inauguration, paraded with it, as did a detachment of the Defendam Society of the Twenty-second Corps of Engineers. Governor Whitman reviewed the parade of the Twelfth from a stand erected outside of the Union League Club, together with Major Gen. O'Ryan, Adjt. Gen. Stotesbury, Brig. Gen. George R. Dyer, Major Gen. Charles F. Roe and others.

The machine gun companies and ammunition motor cars attracted special interest along the entire line of march. Some of the men brought along the unlovely, but harmless, horned toad, a goat, the source of income of many natives of Northern Mexico, paraded the entire course with the Twelfth.

The Sixty-ninth returned in command of Colonel William Hayward. It received its first ovation from school children waving tiny American flags on the steps of the Catholic School of Guardian Angels, on West Twenty-third Street. The Sixty-ninth marched up Tenth Avenue, convoyed by the Society of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, who were led by Supreme Court Justice Victor J. Dowling and by their Spanish war veterans. To the tune of "The Rocky Road to Dublin" the "Fighting Irish Regiment" marched up Tenth Avenue to Fifty-seventh Street. There it crossed to Fifth Avenue and down to Twenty-sixth Street and through it to its armory at Twenty-sixth Street and Lexington Avenue.

Reviewed by Cardinal Farley.

Cardinal Farley, Bishop Hayes, Mgr. Lavelle, and other prominent Catholic clergy reviewed the men from the steps of St. Patrick's Cathedral. The regiment had been delayed to such an extent that it did not reach this point until nearly 6 o'clock, and the men, accustomed to a temperature seldom under 90 degrees, marched briskly in the biting wind of the evening. The crowd that cheered them had waited for several hours, and it was so great that it nearly blocked the sidewalks. Governor Whitman and his staff reviewed the Sixty-ninth from another temporary stand erected in front of the Public Library at Fifth Avenue and Fortieth Street. With him were George W. Wickersham, S. W. Fairchild, Commander Robert P. Forshew of the New York Naval Militia, and other prominent men.

In their armories both returning regiments held receptions for members of their families and friends, after the parades were over. Governor Whitman spoke briefly at the receptions, and refreshments were served. Some of the soldiers complained that "you've got a rotten climate up North here," but they all agreed on one thing—that they were mighty glad to be home. Lieut. Col. Foster said that not a single man became ill during the trip home. A number of the men were taken ill on their trip to the border. This difference the officers cited as one evidence of the fine trim in which the men returned after their field experiences.

Though they had just returned, many of the men of both regiments received assurance from their employers last night that their places would be open for them today or whenever they could return to work. Special efforts are being made by A. S. Morrison, Acting Chief of the Federal Bureau of Employment, and by many individual officers of the regiments, to find places for those who find themselves out of employment.

The return of these regiments leaves only 235 New York Guardsmen who have not yet returned from the border. They are the 175 men of the Division Field Train, which is now hiking to San Antonio, from which point it will start by rail for New York, and the Fourth Ambulance Company, now on its way North. The men will not be mustered out for a week or ten days, but will be allowed to go to their homes meanwhile and report daily at the armories.

Waitresses Tell Legislators It's Safer to Stick to Roast Beef.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 6.—Waitresses who came to this city to urge the passage of the Graves-Marsh bill providing that no woman shall work more than six days or fifty-four hours a week in any restaurant, declared at the joint hearing before the Committee on Labor and Industries today, that there was much uncleanliness in the kitchens of some of the restaurants in the State. They referred, they said, to "swell tea rooms," lunch rooms operated by big companies, and to cheap bakery restaurants.

"It's the uptown and cheaper places in the apartment house district and on the east side I'm talking against," said Belle Bonner of New York City, who has been a waitress for thirteen years.

Another waitress, Sarah Greene, corroborated what Miss Bonner said, and added:

"If you knew how some of the kitchens are run, you wouldn't eat hash, mutton or croquettes, you would stick to roast beef and beefsteak."

James Churchill of "Churchill's," Adolph Susscin of Terrace Garden, James Thompson of Rector's, Patrick V. Kyne of Murray's, Richard Sauce of the New Amsterdam, John McGlynn, President of the State Hotel Men's Association, and Charles J. Campbell, counsel for the association, appeared against the measure, chiefly because under its terms they would not be able to employ cleaners before 6 o'clock in the morning nor telephone girls after 10 o'clock at night.

"If this measure goes through," said Mr. Churchill, "we'll have to discharge ten or fifteen women, most of them widows, from our pantry. They come to work at 3 o'clock in the morning to clean out the place. Why, this bill will throw a thousand women out of employment in New York City."

When reported out, the Graves-Marsh bill will be amended probably to meet Mr. Churchill's objections by being made to apply only to waitresses.

ALL POSTMASTERS UNDER CIVIL SERVICE

President Said to Have Decided to Extend the Rules Throughout, Beginning on April 1.

BURLESON GIVES WARNING

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Members of the House said today that Postmaster General Burleson had told them recently that the President had decided to put all first, second, and third class Postmasters under the civil service by executive order to become effective on April 1. The fourth class Postmasters were put under civil service by President Taft, so that if this decision stands all Postmasters hereafter will be appointed after competitive examinations instead of by political preferment.

The change will be almost revolutionary in its effect upon local political machines throughout the country. And as explained by the Postmaster General, the effect will be felt speedily, for the President's plan is not to include present incumbents, but to have examinations for each office as the terms of incumbents expire. Congressmen said they doubted if a tenth of the Postmasters could pass the civil service examinations, and that the effect of the order would be an immediate downfall of political fences throughout the country.

Congressmen discussing the matter today were plainly disturbed at the effect of the coming order on their political supporters. The Postmasters heretofore have been regarded as the local political leaders of the party in power, or at least as the local workers, in a particular sense they were supposed to be workers for the Congressman that procured their appointments. In Congressional minds, that is where the shoe pinches.

Mr. Burleson was described as being prepared for clamorous expressions of disapproval. He pointed out to alarmed Congressmen that in the end the change would work to their advantage, because they would thereafter be saved the embarrassment and labor of having to choose Postmasters from among their active constituents. Many Congressmen have said that the distribution of patronage was their hardest task. Some have settled rivalries by the flip of a coin.

As Mr. Burleson outlined the plan, it was intended for the efficiency of the service and to remove it from political influences. Congressmen got the impression that he wanted not only to improve the method of selecting Postmasters but to improve the system of supervising them. To this end he is contemplating making the principal Postmaster in each locality, perhaps one in each county, supervisor of the administration of all the offices within his jurisdiction.

Burr McIntosh Suggests "Vigilantes of America" to Crush Sedition.

The "Vigilantes of America," to be composed of a hundred million Americans, with the purpose of stamping out treason and sedition, was suggested to 2,000 persons in Carnegie Hall last night by Burr McIntosh, who lectured on "America for Americans." Part of the proceeds were for the United States Boy Scouts.

"I propose that we take stern measures with all anarchists and those who talk against our country and our government," he said. "If they are American citizens they should go to jail for the first offense. They should be sent to the electric chair for the second. If they are citizens of a foreign country they should be deported, and if they return they should be shot."

When Mr. McIntosh showed a picture of the American and Japanese flags intertwined and suggested that the two countries "affiliate" there was much applause, as there had been hisses and hoots a few minutes before when a picture of the Kaiser trying to lure the Japanese into an alliance against the United States had been shown.

There was a wild outcry of disapproval when he gave a list of the members of the House of Representatives who had voted against the Armed Neutrality bill and when he showed pictures of the Senators who led the filibuster.

JAPANESE ADMITS INJUSTICE TO CHINA

Dr. Ukita Says Japan's Actions Have Not Squared with Her Avowals.

CALLS POLICY UNSTABLE

Now Urges Convincing Proof of Her Intention to Guarantee China's Integrity.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Unusual interest is being shown in diplomatic and official circles here in the translation of an article by Dr. Ukita, one of the "intellectuals" of Japan, which appeared in the Taiyo, (The Sun,) one of the leading magazines in the Orient, of which he is the editor. Dr. Ukita's article, the text of which has just reached Washington, is considered all the more interesting on account of the rare frankness with which he discusses the relation of Japan to the rest of the Orient and the attitude of the Japanese Government toward that of China, and because of its intimations of Japan's misconduct in her treatment of China during the last five years.

Dr. Ukita asserts that Japan's policy toward China has been very unstable since the first revolution of 1912 and that, while it was true that Japan has occasionally declared to the world her advocacy of the principle of preserving China's integrity, her "actions have not been in strict accord with her avowals." In that portion of his article in which he endeavors to explain why China has not trusted Japan Dr. Ukita says:

"There were, indeed, circumstances that justified the suspicions entertained by the Chinese that Japan instigated the dissension between the North and the South and that she was secretly working for a partition of China."

A translation of Dr. Ukita's statement of the situation follows:

"To put the position in abstract terms, Japan's diplomacy toward China is shaped in accordance with the principle of preserving the integrity of China, as has frequently been declared by successive Japanese Governments, and there is not the least doubt that the Japanese people, too, are unanimous in advocating this principle. The policy, however, admits of two interpretations, namely, in a wide and in a narrow sense. There are cases where partition is even necessary in order to accomplish the ultimate object of preserving the integrity of a State.

"The Britain of the nineteenth century stood by the principle of preserving the integrity of Turkey, but as her line of diplomacy she recognized the independence of Greece in 1830 and the independence of Rumania, Serbia, and Montenegro at the Berlin Conference in 1877. Moreover, she conceded Austria jurisdiction over Bosnia and Herzegovina, while actually securing possession of Cyprus for herself. The preservation of the integrity of China, too, is open to two interpretations. In 1900 an agreement was entered into between Britain and Germany having for its object the preservation of the integrity of China and commercial freedom. Germany put a narrow construction upon the agreement, for in the following year Prince Buelow declared that Manchuria was not included in the compact. At that time Germany was giving Russia a free hand in her development in the East, while planning to lay the foundation of predominant influence in Eastern Europe herself, so it is superfluous to explain the methods which actuated Prince Buelow to make that declaration.

Chinese Need Outside Aid.

"Two constructions can be similarly put on Japan's principle of preserving the integrity of China. As a matter of fact, China is incompetent to preserve the integrity of her principal eighteen provinces without enlisting the support of outside powers. What Japan can assure the Chinese people with complete confidence is simply that she can preserve the integrity of these principal Chinese provinces on joint responsibility with China, provided that intimate relations are established between the two countries.

"The establishment of cordial friendship between Japan and China will eliminate the necessity of Japan's obtaining from China an official pledge that no territory on the Chinese coast shall be ceded to any foreign power. On the other hand, these pledges, though obtained, would be of no practical value if the relations between those countries were anything but friendly. In such case Japan would have to shoulder the whole responsibility of preserving the integrity of China single-handed, but it is impossible for Japan to take upon herself such weighty responsibility.

"As regards Manchuria and Inner Mongolia, in which regions Japan is directly interested, there will be no fear of these districts being ceded to other countries if Japan acts in a circumspect manner. Before the conclusion of the new Russo-Japanese agreement, however, Japan was not in a position to give any definite pledge in this respect, but the conclusion of the new compact has brought about a marked change in the meaning of the preservation of the integrity of China.

"In the face of the Russo-Japanese agreement the Anglo-Japanese alliance and the Anglo-Russian entente, there is no reason to suspect that Japan, Russia, and Britain would, either overtly or covertly, take the initiative in causing the partition of China. Each of these three powers fully appreciates the special interests which Britain, Russia, and Japan possess in Tibet, Outer Mongolia, and Inner Mongolia and Manchuria, respectively. So long as the Chinese Government makes no blunders in its line of policy in dealing with these territories, it will only accrue to the advantage of the powers concerned to maintain the status quo. Now that the Russo-Japanese agreement has been concluded in conjunction with the Anglo-Japanese alliance, there is no occasion for Japan to interpret the avowed principle of preserving the integrity of China in a narrow sense. It may even be said that from a wider interpretation of the principle spring the true motives of cementing the relations between Japan and China.

Japan's Chinese Policy Unstable.

"The reason why China has hitherto been unable to trust Japan is because the Chinese could not understand the exact meaning of the principle of preserving the integrity of China advocated by this country. Japan's policy toward China has been very unstable since the first revolution in 1912. It is true that she has occasionally declared to the world her advocacy of the principle of preserving China's integrity, but her actions have not been in strict accord with her avowals. There were, indeed, circumstances that justified the suspicions entertained by the Chinese that Japan instigated the dissension between the north and south, and that she was secretly working for a partition of China.

"It was the Japanese who always acted in a manner derogatory to the promotion of Sino-Japanese friendship, the importance of which they have so strenuously preached. The Japanese Government has invariably failed to foresee these blunders and to nip the evils in the bud, and it has been at great pains to make good the serious consequences of these mistakes. Thus far, Japan has adopted toward China a diplomacy of gross inconsistency in preaching the necessity of Sino-Japanese friendship and at the same time destroying all that China hoped for. Who will ever regard it as a true manifestation of love to kiss the left cheek and slap the right? Hitherto Japan's diplomacy vis-à-vis China has been running counter to a canon of bushido, namely bullying the weak. It would be a diplomatic miracle if Sino-Japanese friendship were to result from such a line of diplomacy.

"The best way to establish the desired intimacy between Japan and China is for the Japanese to formulate the guiding principle of their diplomacy toward China, instead of grumbling about the attitude assumed by the Chinese toward them. When once this guiding principle is established, it is most important that it should be adhered to firmly and unflinchingly. In the Anglo-Japanese alliance and in the Russo-Japanese agreement both Great Britain and Russia look to Japan for the maintenance of peace in East Asia, and consequently Japan is charged with the mission of protecting China and India. This is probably what the so-called 'Asiatic Monroe Doctrine' means. Now that Japan has deprived Germany of her colony at Tsing-tau, it need scarcely be said that China cannot cede any territory on the east coast to any country without first consulting Japan. This point can be definitely settled after the war with the consent of Germany. Whatever pledges may be exacted from the Chinese Government at the present time, they are, to all intents and purposes, scraps of paper. As China has no real strength to meet foreign pressure, Japan must come to her aid in such emergency, and must carry out a policy appropriate for protecting her own interests with her actual power. In this way Japan must ever pursue a protective policy toward China.

"The Japanese people have so far failed to give any assurances to the Chinese people on the Manchurian and Mongolian questions. This is because Japan has been uncertain about the policies contemplated by Britain and Russia in regard to Tibet and the East. So long as the rivalry between Britain and Russia in Central Asia continued, the Japanese were unable to commit themselves to any definite pledges concerning Chinese territory outside the eighteen provinces. In plain language, the Japanese were desirous of maintaining the integrity of China when this was possible, but were persuaded of the necessity of protecting their own interests, which is the ultimate object of preserving the integrity of China.

Calls for Assurances to China.

"Now, however, we have the Anglo-Russian entente and the Russo-Japanese agreement in addition to the Anglo-Japanese alliance, and have public opinion in America taking the initiative in approving the Asiatic 'Monroe Doctrine.' In these circumstances Japan has, for the first time, been put in a position to impart definite meaning to her avowed principle of preserving the integrity of China. In default of giving this definite meaning to the principle, it was but natural that Japan's frequent references to the principle and her earnest advocacy of Sino-Japanese friendship, have had no weight in the eyes of the Chinese people.

"In order to establish the meaning of the principle in question beyond all doubt, with a view to effecting a true Sino-Japanese friendship, the Japanese nation ought to possess two mighty convictions. The first is confidence in their own power to maintain the peace of East Asia single-handed, in case of emergencies, to fulfill the duties imposed upon them by the Anglo-Japanese alliance and the Russo-Japanese agreement. It is scarcely necessary to point out that such steps as Germany resorted to before the Russo-Japanese war in taking possession of Kiao-chau are menacing to the existence and safety of this empire, to say nothing of their leading to a partition of China, and Japan must even stake her existence on preventing such steps being taken in future by any foreign powers. The second is the firm conviction that with the co-operation of Japan it is impossible for China, which is bigger than the European continent both in point of area and of population, to be conquered by an alien nation. To gain this conviction the Japanese nation must not only believe in their own powers, but must also place confidence in the Chinese nation."

Can't Float Grounded Freighter.

Two wrecking tugs failed last night to float the British freighter G. R. Crowe, which grounded on the east bank of the Ambrose Channel on Monday night, and the cargo will have to be jettisoned. The tugs returned to the harbor last night, leaving the steam pilot boat standing by. The stranded steamship was bound for Liverpool with provisions.

OSCAR PFLUG RELEASED.

Embassy Employe Was Taken from Gerard's Party in France.

PARIS, March 6.—The French Government today ordered the release of Oscar Pflug, a former employe of the American Embassy in Berlin. The release was made on representations by the American Ambassador.

Oscar Pflug was one of several persons detained by the French authorities when Ambassador Gerard's party entered France. Pflug's replies to questions put to him were said to have been unsatisfactory, and he was held pending further investigation. Although Pflug had been employed at the embassy in Berlin his name did not appear in the public records of American diplomatic and consular employes, he having been engaged provisionally at Berlin during the press of business.

Max Pflug, father of the man, who lives in Ridlont, Fla., recently appealed to the State Department to use its good offices in obtaining the release of Pflug.

Eighty cases already have been reported, 90 per cent. of which are of persons more than 45 years old. The disease is supposed to have been brought to Berlin by refugees from Volhynia.

SUES ON PARCEL POST LOSS.

U. S. Express Co. Seeks to Establish Right to Cancel Contract.

The United States Express Company entered suit yesterday in the Supreme Court against the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad for $950,000. The complaint says the plaintiff bought the railroad's express business in 1907 for thirty years, paying $1,000,000 cash, $1,500,000 in stock, and agreeing to give the railroad 40 per cent. of the gross receipts. It is alleged that since Jan. 1, 1916, the defendant has failed to give to the express company the exclusive express business over the road, but has permitted an increasing volume of business to be transacted by another agency as the result of which the plaintiff discontinued its service on June 30, 1916, after having operated at a loss for some time.

The express company asks $750,000 damages for breach of contract, and the remainder for the proportionate share of the entire payment made for the unexpired term of the contract.

The attorneys in the case said yesterday that the term "another agency" in the complaint refers to the parcel post. The suit is to test the question whether parcel post inroads into express business justify cancellation of contracts and service.

A great automobile concern's appreciation of The Dictaphone

The Locomobile Company of America, distinguished in the automobile world by a peculiarly far-reaching success, adopts in its offices methods just as efficient as those of its factories.

When the question of reorganizing its correspondence came up in 1915, tests were made and the Locomobile Company began dictating to The Dictaphone. There are now 63 Dictaphones in constant service at headquarters in Bridgeport, in New York, Pittsburgh, Seattle, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

This extensive adoption of The Dictaphone conveys a far stronger idea of the Locomobile Company's appreciation than any words.

Every firm, great or small, that heeds the laws of Economy, Speed and Convenience needs The Dictaphone just as definitely and surely as concerns like the Locomobile Company.

DEMANDED $2,250,000 FOR ROCKAWAY SITE

Agents, After Seeing Adjutant General, Then Agreed to Take $1,000,000.

SENATE PASSES SAGE BILL

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 6.—According to a statement made in the Senate today, agents of the Rockaway Pacific Realty Company, owner of the land at Rockaway Point, which is now being condemned for a fortification site by the State on behalf of the Federal Government, demanded an appropriation of $2,250,000 for the property, which under a prior agreement between the company and the War Department was to have been transferred on the payment of $705,000 by the United States. Then, after five minutes conversation with the Adjutant General, so the statement went, the representatives of the realty company agreed to a reduction of the appropriation to an even $1,000,000.

The Sage bill, carrying that amount, with $10,000 added to defray the cost of the condemnation proceedings, was passed in the Senate today with George F. Thompson of Niagara the only one to vote in opposition.

It was Senator James J. Walker of New York City, one of the Tammany members, who disclosed the alleged exorbitant demand made by the agents of the Rockaway Pacific Realty Company.

Senator Walker spoke in refutation of the charge made by Mayor Mitchel that the obstructionist tactics pursued by the Tammany members of the Senate with the co-operation of certain Republicans led to the defeat of the so-called Mills bill No. 2, which provided for the transfer of the property on terms embodied in a private agreement with the New York City authorities, and would prove costly to the State and city. Senator Walker made the point that, instead of having to shoulder 78 per cent. of the $1,000,000 appropriation, as Mayor Mitchel said, the city would be a gainer by the defeat of the Mills bill.

"We have saved the city 160 acres of water front property which it was to present to the Rockaway Pacific Realty Company for a nominal price of $500 an acre, or $80,000 in all," said the Senator. "From the manner in which the $1,000,000 appropriation was fixed, it should be evident that this is exorbitant, too. Ultimately the city will have to pay much less than was contemplated at first, for it is probable that the Court of Claims will fix the award pretty nearly at the figure arrived at by the city's own expert, or $2,400 per acre for the 134 acres, or in all $321,600."

Senator Walker added that while the Federal Government originally was to get its site for $705,000, it would in all probability pay the State for its entire expense in connection with the acquisition of the land.

GUARDSMAN IN FATAL CRASH

Private Kemp's Motor Cycle Skids and Plunges Against Truck.

Edward Kemp, a private in the First Motor Battery, N. G. N. Y. was killed yesterday afternoon when a motor cycle he was riding in Fifth Avenue skidded and crashed into the rear of an auto truck, throwing him on his head.

Patrolman Flanagan of the East Eighty-eighth Street Station commandeered a passing automobile and rushed Kemp to Mount Sinai Hospital, but he was pronounced dead upon arrival there. The auto truck is owned by the George Ringler Brewing Company. The police said the accident was unavoidable.

Kemp had returned at 3 o'clock from Washington, where he had served in Governor Whitman's escort at the inauguration. He and sixty-nine other members of his command were proceeding north on Fifth Avenue when he left the line to round up stragglers. While on this mission his motor cycle ran into the auto truck. Kemp was 27 years old and was engaged with his father in the wholesale drug business. His home was at 41 West Fifty-first Street.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, March 6.—Nathan Hall of Boston all but clinched his claim to the National Class A amateur billiard championship at the Boston Athletic Association this afternoon when he triumphed over the Pacific Coast expert, Ledyard Blake, in one of the most brilliant matches of the tournament, by a score of 400 to 276. The player from the Hub, of whom so much has been heard and so little seen outside of the confines of Boston, in point of average produced his second best game of the tournament when he made a mark of 13 10-30, but this indication only in a small way the away which he exercised over the ivories for more than half of the game, a combination which beat Blake before the contest was fairly started.

In ten innings Hall amassed a total of 221, which was an average of better than 22 for this stage of the contest. During a like period the count for Blake was only 32, and it was against this tremendous handicap of nearly 200 points that Blake was forced to struggle, with the consciousness that defeat was the only probable outcome.

It turned out just that way, but before he acknowledged the supremacy of his rival the Californian was able to cut down this lead materially. The pace was far too fast for Hall to maintain to the close of the contest, and Blake put forth every effort to make it a match worth while.

Blake Battles Gamely.

That he succeeded in drawing up as close as he did to his victorious antagonist bespeaks a cool, determined fighting disposition, and had he been in good stroke Blake might even have wrested the honors from the Bostonian, whose game toward the close was bearing low gait.

All in all, however, Blake was outclassed. It is doubtful whether there has ever been a finer exhibition of billiards in an amateur tournament than that which was shown by Hall during the first half of the contest. It has been repeatedly remarked that Hall's game was fundamentally very similar to that of Hoppe's. This, of course, does not relate to a comparison of skill, but only a parallel between the method which each employs in playing the game.

For once during the tournament has Hall brought out the comparison more strongly than in this match against Blake. He played confidently, brilliantly, without a trace of nervous, hesitancy over the ivories by manipulation that was free enough to prevent difficulties and close enough to insure consistent scoring. For more than 100 runs he averaged better than 25, and when he rounded the 200 mark, with the average still mounting considerably above 20, the prediction was freely voiced about during the big gathering of spectators that this was the time when he would set the high average mark far beyond the reach of any other competitor in the tournament.

Miss Seems Impossible.

Hall was going so well that the spectators were caught unawares when he missed. So perfect was his stroke during the first ten innings that it was almost impossible to believe that he could miss, which is just the contrary of the feeling that usually prevails in amateur billiards tournaments, even those of the Class A species.

Blake during the early innings was forced to sit by without having much more than a spectator's part in the proceedings. He smiled as the count for his rival steadily mounted, and recognizing a friend in the gathering of spectators shrugged his shoulders as much as to say, "What is the use of my trying here at all?" And yet, although beaten badly, Blake was playing a game that was far removed from being mediocre. To be sure, he could not approach Hall at the outset, but poor play at the beginning is rather characteristic of Blake. He is a slow starter by his own admission. When he did start, however, he made his average soar to 9 2-30, which in the ordinary instances of Class A billiards is a fine performance.

Blake's weakness was mainly noticeable in the draw shots. He was prone to be either a bit too strong or a bit too weak, and many of his runs were terminated because he could not be sure of himself on such strokes. He was beyond question disconcerted, as any player would be, to see his rival's score mount by such leaps and bounds.

The Californian made his best run of the match in the eleventh inning, and it started him off on a more favorable bit of play than he had yet known. Counts in double figures followed, not rapidly, but often enough to make pronounced inroads into the lead which Hall had created and which he was unable to maintain because of hard leaves which many times defied solution.

Ciphers, with which Hall had been heretofore very unfamiliar, began now to crowd in upon his score, and while now and then there was a good cluster the consistency of the earlier innings was lacking. Even at this stage Hall's work would ordinarily have been called superior billiards for an amateur, but it was poor by comparison with what he had before accomplished.

Safety play and the additional fact that neither billiardist was in good stroke combined to slow down the pace of the evening game between the present title holder, Edward W. Gardner of Montclair, and Edward Rein of Chicago. The victory went to the champion after fifty-two innings with the score 400 to 310. The ivories were perverse and neither contestant could bring them under control for any great length of time.

The titleholder counted only 7 points in the first ten innings, and in the same period of play Rein could gather only 45. The Chicago contestant held his advantage only until the twelfth inning. Then Gardner came through with two pretty clusters, one of 26 and the other of 30. A run of 17 following made the score 94 to 61 in favor of the titleholder. Thereafter he was never out of the lead, even though Rein for a time pressed him closely.

YANKS HAVE FIRST DRILL AS SOLDIERS

Undertake Military Work with a Will, Not Unattended by Comic Results.

Special to The New York Times.

MACON, Ga., March 6.—Before they had any baseball training today the players of the Yankee team devoted an hour to Mars. Only in that they were attired in their baseball uniforms were they baseball players. Otherwise they were soldiers, raw material it is true, all but two or three having military training for the first time, but soldiers in the making.

The New York Club launched its part of the preparedness program which Captain T. L. Huston has advocated so warmly. Every player was in the ranks, and, with club officials, scouts, trainers and newspaper men, there was an array of about forty-five more or less warrior-like spirits, most of them green as grass about military matters, but all willing and responsive. Sergeant Gibson, army recruiting officer, put them through their paces in a few elementary movements.

The start was a success. The affair was carried through in a business-like way. There were some humorous developments, but these were merely sidelights of an hour's drill, to which they gave their serious attention. The drill was no farce or joke with the players, and they rendered a good account of themselves.

Sergeant Gibson started his primer class in by showing them how to stand in a soldierly attitude, and followed with "Attention," "Right face," "About face," "Right dress," the way to salute and a few marching formations. They were not always in step, and the southpaws of the team wanted to salute with the left hand, a mistake which the drillmaster corrected with a partly repressed smile.

The baseball practice was not curtailed because of the military practice. The morning and afternoon sieges were both long, and, aided by fine weather, severe. It was along the same lines as yesterday. Caldwell, Love, Russell, Cullop and Shawkey did the pitching for the batting practice. Caldwell, whether he wintered in Panama or Greenland, has put in two busy days here. Bill Piercy, the youngster, had a long siege of pitching off to the side, with Donovan a close observer. Donovan is asking him to do a good deal so that he will get control. The manager coached Slim Love in pitching a low ball.

Ray Fisher and George Mogridge did all their work in the infield, Fisher at short and Mogridge at first. The latter is a hard worker. Fisher has not done any pitching at all yet. He wants to condition himself first, and as a mound fadeaway does not arrive until late.

There were six infielders and six outfielders in the fielding practice of the regulars. Pipp and Baker hold their positions unchallenged, but every other place has two candidates. In the outfield Miller and Hendryx were in left; Magee and High in centre; Gilhooley and Bankston in right. Peckinpaugh has been delayed by the illness of his father, but may be here the latter part of the week.

PRIZE FOR PLAYERS' DRILL.

Ban Johnson Offers $500 for Best Team in American League.

CHICAGO, March 6.—Baseball teams of the American League now receiving military instructions in their training camps are to compete for drilling honors, Captain Franklin H. Kenney, U. S. A., in command of recruiting in the Central Department of the Army, announced tonight.

Captain Kenney said that President B. B. Johnson of the American League, originator of the military training plan for ball players, has offered a $500 prize to the best drilled team in the league and a prize of $100 in gold to the drill sergeant who instructs the winning players. The competition will be decided in July.

The training plan for ball players has spread to other leagues. The Milwaukee and Indianapolis Clubs are among the American Association teams that have taken up the movement.

Orange Five Downs the Green.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., March 6.—Syracuse University defeated Dartmouth at basket ball here tonight, 26 to 17.

McGRAW'S SQUAD COMPLETE

Herzog Dons Togs and Full Complement of Veterans Lines Up.

Special to The New York Times.

MARLIN, Texas, March 6.—The first practice of McGraw's complete outfield and infield and a practice game between mixed teams were the features of a busy day at Emerson Park. The Giants took advantage of the more moderate weather and put in long hours of work on the diamond, the sidelines and the handball courts.

Charley Herzog donned a uniform for the first time this morning and participated in infield exercises. Herzog is a bit under weight, but getting into condition will be a matter of only a few days. McGraw lined up the veteran infield again this afternoon, but dismissed it after fifteen minutes of practice.

Germany Schaefer and Honus Lobert sent their picked teams into action this afternoon, and Schaefer was once more returned loser by a score of 3 to 2. The score was close because Schaefer remained in the coachers' box and depended on others to do his pitching. Causey and Lohman held the winning team to five hits in four innings, while the Schaefer nine collected seven safeties from the pitching of Schacht and Smith in five rounds at bat. The Schaefers scored in the first inning on Kilduff's single and Kauff's double, but in the second period the Loberts took the lead, when Barris hit to deep left field for a home run and scored Thorpe ahead of him.

The Schaefers tied in the fourth on a single by Rodriguez and Kelly's double, and the game was decided in the last half of that inning when Holke tripled and scored on a sacrifice fly. The fielding was snappy and errorless and the pitchers are now releasing so many twists that the batting is not so brisk.

The teams lined up today as follows:

Schaefers—Murray, left field; Kilduff, short stop; Rodriguez, first base; Kauff, centre field; Kelly, right field; Wagner, second base; Young, third base; Kruger, catcher; Causey and Lohman, pitchers.

HOLDS MILITARY DRILL

Columbia Baseball Squad Is Put Through Infantry Exercises.

Realization of the plan to train the Columbia University baseball team in infantry drill came yesterday afternoon in the gymnasium. Coach Andy Coakley suspended the capers of throwing and batting the spheres in the cage for half an hour while a squad of about twenty-five was piloted to the drill floor in the smaller gymnasium, where E. B. Ralston, '16, a former West Point cadet, put the players through the rudiments of infantry drill executions. The position of a soldier, the facings, simple march formations, and the salute formed the first day's program, and as the players become more proficient squad and platoon executions will be taught. Coach Coakley, the former Athletics twirler, was enthusiastic over the plan and took part himself in the drills.

Battery Practice Starts at N. Y. U.

The baseball season was officially opened at New York University yesterday with indoor practice for catchers and pitchers. Among the most promising men who reported to Coach Kellogg were Goundry, a catcher who comes from Colgate; Sokolower, the football tackle, who will try for a place on the receiving end, and Marden, a catcher who participated in several games last year. The pitchers who reported included Kranichfield, Varsity twirler two years ago; Wolf, a first string man from last year, and Shea, a new man, formerly of Morris High School.

COLUMBIA FIVE IS BEATEN BY TIGERS

Accurate Shooting by Haas and Parmalee Leads to Princeton's Victory by 18 to 13.

Dartmouth	4	5	.444
Columbia	4	7	.364

PRINCETON, N. J., March 6.—The Columbia basket ball team played a rather loose game against Princeton here tonight, and the Tigers were able to win by the score of 18 to 13. The contest was probably the poorest played on the Princeton court this season, the Morningside Heights five showing a complete reversal of form, while the Tigers played a game which made them appear far from contenders for the league championship.

Coach Leuhring sent in a rather patched-up lineup for Princeton at the beginning of the contest, Captain Haas starting at centre, while Cuneo took his place at guard. This change spoiled the floor work of the Tigers. Both teams showed a tendency toward wild passing, and the handling of the ball was markedly poor. The shooting affility of Captain Haas and Parmelee enabled the Princeton team to take the lead at the beginning however, and it was never headed. Latour caged the only field goal for the Blue and White in the half, and this with two foul goals by Leonard accounted for all the points made by the Columbia team at the close of the period, when the score stood 13 to 4.

Both teams guarded closely during the second half, and there was very little scoring. Leonard, Latour, and Roberts each dropped in a pretty basket, while Captain Haas made two field goals for Princeton. Leonard was a tower of strength for Columbia.

The lineup:

Princeton. (18.)	Position.	Columbia. (13.)
Parmelee	L.F.	Latour
Paulsen	R.F.	Roberts
Haas	C.	Leonard
Rahill	L.G.	Farer
Cuneo	R.G.	Farrell

Goals from field—Parmelee, (3.) Paulsen, (2.) Latour, (2.) Haas, (2.) Roberts, Leonard. Goals from fouls—Paulsen, (4.) Leonard, (5.) Substitutions—Eddys for Haas, Haas for Cuneo, Alexander for Leonard, Leonard for Latour. Referee—Mr. Deering, Manhattan. Umpire—Mr. Hutchinson, Cornell. Time of periods—Twenty minutes.

THE FINN IN EMPIRE CITY.

Bayberry Candle Another Late Entry for Handicap Classic.

H. C. Hallenbeck's The Finn, which had a strong claim to the handicap honors of the 1916 racing season, is one of the late entries received for the Empire City Handicap. Another late entry of note is J. W. May's great race mare Bayberry Candle. Interest in the Empire City Derby will be increased by the late entry of Westy Hogan, which was the two-year-old star of the West last season. Other good horses have been added to both these events.

Since the announcement of entries made by the Empire City Racing Association, the day after the entries closed, one hundred more nominations have been received for the fifteen stakes, bringing the total up to 1,186. The entries for the stakes probably are all in now, the figures being:

DUNDEE OUTPOINTS DUFFY.

Johnny Dundee, the lightweight contender for championship honors, outpointed Jimmy Duffy, a West side rival, in the feature ten-round bout last night at the Pioneer Sporting Club, but in gaining the honors Dundee was forced to go at top speed in the majority of the rounds. Duffy, an aggressive boxer with no pretense at science, but a steady puncher to the stomach at close range, showed up somewhat as a surprise against the Italian boxer, and traded blows willingly throughout with Dundee.

In the early rounds Duffy did well at infighting and scored numerous times with snappy blows to the stomach. As the contest progressed, however, Dundee countered effectively with full arm left and right-hand swings to the stomach, and alternated his attack with left-hand jabs to the face which sent Duffy backward on his heels several times. The latter did not show the effects of Dundee's heavy blows until the final round, when he tired noticeably and was unable to return the Italian's attack to the stomach.

Memories of old-time boxing days were revived with an exhibition of three rounds between the original Young Griffo of Australia and Young Corbett, the old-time Denver featherweight. The exhibition was refereed by Jack McAuliffe, who retired undefeated lightweight champion, and Jimmie Britt, the San Francisco lightweight, kept time on the rounds. The sum of $346.10 was realized on a collection taken up for the purpose of sending Griffo back to his home in Australia.

Former Iowa Football Mentor Recommended by Alumni.

ST. PAUL, March 6.—Jesse Hawley, former football coach at Iowa, has been recommended for the position of gridiron coach at Dartmouth, his alma mater, by the Middle West Alumni Association of Hanover College, it was learned here today. The place at Dartmouth is vacant through the resignation of Frank Cavanaugh.

Huntington, Jr., Colgate, '14, who in the Fall of 1913 was chosen All-American quarter back, has been named to succeed Larry Bankhart as head coach of the Colgate football team for next year, it was announced tonight. W. T. Englehorn, a Dartmouth graduate, who in 1906 was selected by Walter Camp for All-American tackle, will be line coach.

Huntington has acted as assistant coach under Bankhart for the last two seasons. Englehorn coached the Case School eleven last year.

HOCKEY MEN MAY REJECT ALLIANCE

Much Opposition to Affiliation with Skating Union—Hallock Plans Conference.

President George Hallock of the Amateur Hockey League stated yesterday that he would hold a conference within the next few days with officials of the International Skating Union and the Amateur Athletic Union relative to the proposal to place amateur hockey under the jurisdiction of the Skating Union and the A. A. U. Mr. Hallock would not commit himself on the project, but it is known that several of those connected with amateur hockey are opposed to any alliance with the Skating Union.

At a recent meeting between officials of the international body and President Frederick Rubien of the A. A. U. it was proposed to amend the rules of the skating body whereby the absolute control of amateur hockey would be vested in the Skating Union. Clubs like the New York A. C. and the Boston A. A. would not consider such an alliance as long as rink managers or officials connected with rinks held office in the skating organization.

Cornelius Fellowes, President of the International Skating Union, has consented to resign his place if the proposed alliance is brought about. Also other officials who are connected with rinks in a professional capacity have consented to drop out.

The constant state of upheaval in the ranks of the Amateur Hockey League during the present season has prompted the skating people to try to bring about some change whereby the hockey players will be brought under the jurisdiction of the A. A. U., and thus free the hockey organization from all the trouble it has been having with players whose amateur standing has been questioned.

The Amateur Hockey League had its first alliance with the A. A. U. in 1908, when the league decided to adopt the A. A. U.'s rule for amateurs. Requests have been made to the A. A. U. on more than one occasion to take over the control of hockey, but as the sport has never been centralized and has been such a local affair, a working alliance has never been effected.

According to the present plan of alliance, it is proposed to have all hockey players register with the various skating associations, as the A. A. U. members are registered. It is planned to have the Eastern Skating Association, the New England Association, and the Middle West Association the centres for registration.

BOMEISLER TAKES FINAL.

Douglas M. Bomeisler, the former Yale football end, won the Class C squash championship at the Yale Club yesterday afternoon, defeating A. A. Gammel in a hard-fought match, by scores of 15—12, 18—15, 4—15, 15—11.

Gammel pressed Bomeisler hard in the first two games and rallied so well in the third that he won, 15—4. It was a smashing, fast content, and Bomeisler won in the fourth game, after Gammel could not keep up the speed he had attained in the third game.

Levy Named to Succeed Miner.

At a meeting of the officials of the Harlem Athletic League held last night in the clubhouse of the Harbrook A. C. of Harlem, it was unanimously decided that Benjamin Levy should serve out the unexpired term of the President of the league, to fill the vacancy caused by the recent accidental death of George E. Miner, who formerly held that office. The league's postponed run of last Sunday, which was canceled because of the unfavorable weather conditions, will be held on March 25 over the Harbrook five-mile course.

Studebaker Series "18" Cars

Both FOUR and SIX are equipped with the same big Safety-Insuring Brakes. They act on a 15" drum with 2½" facings—more brake area per pound of weight than you find on other cars.

With four years' experience on the same basic design, with 250,000 cars in the hands of owners, Studebaker has perfected its system of brake exactly as it has perfected and refined every other part of the car—into a perfect, smooth-working mechanism.

Leverages have been scientifically worked out, so that a touch of the Brake Pedal, or on the Emergency Brake lever, exerts great pressure on the Brake surfaces.

The Brakes are simply but perfectly equalized, so that the pressure on both wheels is exactly the same. No slipping of one wheel; no tendency to skid, due to unequal brake pressure; the instant stopping of the car in a straight line—thus your safety is insured to the maximum.

In short—good brakes on your car is perhaps really one of the most vital and necessary things in SAFE driving.

'THE WILLOW TREE' A THING OF BEAUTY

AN ANCIENT LEGEND RETOLD

THE WILLOW TREE. A play in three acts by J. Harry Benrimo and Harrison Rhodes. At the Cohan & Harris.

Hugo ..... Arvid Paulsen
Ribera ..... Harold De Becker
Geoffrey Fuller ..... Harold Vosburgh
Howard Hamilton ..... Shelley Hull
John Charles Goto ..... Richard Taber

Quaint, full of rare charm, and often beautiful in fancy and in spirit—these are things we can all say of a new play of universal appeal which was presented last evening at the Cohan and Harris Theatre. It is called "The Willow Tree," and it is a reworking of an ancient Japanese legend. Under the rose-pink skies in a perfumed garden of the Japan of today it tells once more that immortal story of love and sacrifice, the legend of the willow tree.

As in that older tale, the tree-spirit princess denounced her mortal life to send back the great Itomudo, that he might lead the fight against the enemies of Nippon, so does her reincarnation in our own day send back to the arms of the young Englishman who had fallen in love with her beneath the willow tree.

This fantasie is the work of two authors. As with "The Yellow Jacket," one of them is Benrimo. The other this time is not Mr. Hasleton, but Harrison Rhodes and between them, they have written a romance that presents a little Galatea from Japan.

The Galatea is Fay Bainter, who brings witchery and a touching tenderness to the role. Here is the central figure in a company that has been wisely chosen, for the celebrated house of Cohan & Harris has spared no pains in this, their first aesthetic adventure in the theatre.

They still have work to do. In "The Willow Tree" they have a play of much beauty and wide appeal. They have staged it handsomely and gathered for it the right company. But the play is marred now by an excess of tricks, of which the visible and creaky mechanics arrest the attention, scatter the illusion, and offend the soul. It is also overlong, an affliction not uncommon with plays which they are not reared in the provinces, but produced in New York, as in this case, "for the first time on any stage."

As the faithful Nora hacks away the branches of the willow tree, though it kill the fair mistress whom he adores, so must Benrimo and Rhodes chop utmost an hour out of "The Willow Tree," though their fond hearts bleed at the process. It was a bit after 12:30 o'clock last evening when the sliding screens parted on the Cohan & Harris stage; it was not long before 12 when the play was done. At it stands, it could profitably run almost as long as hour of the hare to the hour of the monkey.

In the old legend the dreamy Itomudo found in big far-away hermitage a fair flower, though he did not know it had come from the heart of the green willow tree. So great was her enchantment that he would not have heard the call of his home land in its hour of need and she not persuaded him, all [illegible]

[illegible] Itomudo is honorable Hamilton, young Edward Hamilton, who comes out from England to try to forget Mary Temple. In England they seemed not to have enough of the world's goods to make a match of it, but out in Japan, where the flowers are all about and where a rice mat to lie on at night and some rice wine to drink by day seem riches enough, he begins to think less of England, of Mary, and of himself for their false standards. And so, loving Japan, writing verses to her rain gods and willfully believing all her legends, he brings to his garden house an image of the Princess of the Willow Tree, the cherished possession of an old carver who needs the money to send his modern son to Cornell, America. It is this image which, like another Galatea, comes to life and dwells for ten days in this strangely like, being exactly like the tree-spirit of old, hauntingly like what was fair and good in the far-away Mary Temple.

Like many playwrights before them, our authors this time know how ill illuminating a recitation of life can suggest by bringing into it a wondering being from another age or another world. So it is with the willow tree lady, a very woman who falls in love the moment she steps down from her lotus blossom. Rapidly, in the ten days allotted to her, she learns the lesson of life. By instinct she is fair, arch, improvident, timid. She scatters Hon. Hamilton's money like chaff, and she is augustly anxious that the honorable black cricket should be shown the way out of the house. Then, little by little, she learns coquetry and the fear of old age.

She is told and believes that she and all of us have come into the world for happiness.

"Ah, yes," she adds, sadly. "Happiness! But whose?"

She had come into the world because he wanted her, for what, ask the Japanese, is so real as a wish in the heart of man? But in the world she learns sympathy and love and comes at last to know the fragrance of the perfumed flower of self sacrifice. So, when the call from England comes, it is she who renounces the life his wish had created and, with the old spirit of the willow tree lady reborn in her heart, she returns to her pedestal and sends him overseas to serve the Hon. George King.

The desire to suggest that the Galatea from the willow carver's shop and the girl the Englishman left behind him are really one and the same, the one woman of his desire, has driven the authors to have the two roles played by one actress. For this they pay a heavy price, a prohibitive price. The repeated need of Miss Bainter's now vanishing as the will ow tree lady, now reappearing as Mary Temple, leads to such a scampering as we have not had since the dual rôle in "The Prisoner of Zenda."

There is no much popping in and out of the cabinet that you can think of nothing except the vanishing lady in the old magician's bag of tricks. It always seems as if the cue had been given for Mr. Keller to walk on the stage, roll up his sleeves, wave his arm, and do a bit of levitation, thereafter placing Galatea in a neat case and producing her a moment later from a tall vase, together with two goldfish and a rabbit. By the last act this becomes maddening.

It simply wrecks the spell of the play. It is always trying to have your bouquet of roses wired on their stems. When the wires show it spoils the party. Time and again in "The Willow Tree" the wires show. There is one poor consolation. These tricks will make folks talk about the play, and after all it is a play worth talking about.

Miss Bainter is charming. The always virtuous artifice of her acting does not, in this role, detract fro inthe values of her performance. She shares the evening with Shelly Hull, who plays with fine, romantic fervor. Incidentally he is an actor who can be handsome on the stage without irritating you in the process. Good work, too, is done by George W. Wilson, (of course,) Richard Taber, and Arvid Paulson. They work hard, the sweet perfume, the soft afternoon lights, the fluttering butterflies, the chirping crickets, and the splashing fountain of "The Willow Tree," a play every one ought to see and nearly every one will.

THE KNEISEL QUARTET.

Schumann, Mendelssohn, and Schoenberg on the Program.

At the fifth concert of the Kneisel Quartet last evening in Aeolian Hall the program comprised Schumann's A major quartet, Mendelssohn's octet, and Arnold Schönberg's sextet, "Verklärte Nacht," which Mr. Kneisel had already played once this season and now repeated "by request." There is a story that Mendelssohn once urged Schumann to join a party of which he was a member to take a walk, and upon Schumann's declining, on the ground that he wished to work on the string quartet that he was composing, Mendelssohn somewhat rudely and unkindly remarked that he would be in better business walking with him. That was only one indication of what Mendelssohn thought of Schumann as a composer, and especially a composer of chamber music. It seems now as if Schumann was in better hands writing chamber music than Mendelssohn ever was. It seemed so last evening, when Mendelssohn's octet immediately followed Schumann's quartet. The quartet is still warm and vital; the octet seemed a little reanimated for the occasion. The first movement that used to strike fire has paled a little, and the fairies of the scherzo are not quite believed in now. But though the work has faded somewhat, there is still much in it that gives pleasure, especially in a performance so finished and so rounded as that Mr. Kneisel and his associates gave last evening. There were many, evidently, who were glad to hear it. There were certainly many who were glad to hear Schumann's quartet and willing to absolve it from the charge once made against it that it is too much like a pianoforte piece transcribed for strings.

Edouard Dethier, Elias Breeskin, Louis Bostelmann, and Jacques Renard were the players who assisted the Quartet.

SARI PETRASS MARRIES.

Light Opera Prima Donna Weds Felix A. E. Sommerhoff, Broker.

Sari Petrass, light opera prima donna, and Felix Augustus Eugene Sommerhoff, a broker of Cedarhurst, L. I., were married yesterday in the marriage chapel of the Municipal Building. John R. Dalton, Deputy City Clerk, read the marriage ceremony. The bridegroom gave his age as 31 years, and the bride said she was 28.

The bride made her American début last Fall in "Miss Springtime," at the New Amsterdam. She withdrew from the cast early in the run of that piece and later played on tour in a new Strauss operetta. "The Beautiful Unknown," in which she created the prima donna rôle last year in Budapest. She is a native of Hungary and is a niece of the Countess Klinsky, a Hungarian prima donna, who appeared at the Irving Place, under the name of Ilka Palmay many years ago. Besides being well known in her own country, the bride appeared with success in London for two seasons before the war.

ISADORA DUNCAN DANCES.

Isadora Duncan, who, when she last left America, was quoted as saying this country lacked a knowledge of art, danced at the Metropolitan last night before an audience that nearly filled the house, including 500 standees, who shouted noisily for a rising assembly to "Sit down!" during final numbers of "The Marseillaise" and "Star-Spangled Banner."

Miss Duncan, draped in an American flag, made a speech at the close. The was war not a time for artists, she said, but if there were none at home they would rather be in the trenches, and if they were women they would be nursing or helping in some way. Cries of "No! No!" led her to add that later on she meant to found a school here to "dance the songs of freedom."

A large orchestra, under Oscar Spirescu, played for two hours of solo pantomime to the symphonies of Franck and Tschaikowsky.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

The first performance in America of John Galsworthy's drama, "The Fugitive," took place last night in the Shubert Theatre, New Haven. In the cast were Emily Stevens, Forrest Orrick, Forrest Winant, Charlotte Granville, Annie Hughes, Charles Harbury, Thomas MacLarnie, Alice Johns, Duncan McRae, and Henry Erwin.

Charlotte will return to the Hippodrome next Monday and remain there through the rest of the season. The skater has been on tour since last Fall, but with the Hippodrome company she will be seen in a new skating divertissement in the ice ballet which forms the last third of the show.

The repertoire of the Montmartre Players will consist of one-act playlets written by Columbia University students. It will be presented at two performances—one private, the other public—next month.

It is announced that E. H. Sothern will devote considerable time to playwriting now that he has retired from the stage. He will also write a series of critical articles on the general subject, "The Stage as I Knew It," for magazine publication.

Florenz Ziegfeld, Jr., has returned from a holiday of several weeks spent at Palm Beach. The resort gave him the idea of reproducing some of its most familiar aspects for an act of the next "Follies."

"Maggie and "The Little Man" will not be withdrawn from the local stage when they are forced to leave the Maxine Elliott on March 17, if negotiations under way for another theatre succeed.

Nat M. Wills will join the company that appears in the midnight revue at the Cocoanut Grove atop the Century next Monday night.

Exterina Galanta, the Russian dancer, will make her first appearance as premiere ballerina in "The Waldteufel" at the Manhattan Opera House tonight.

A special showing of Ty Cobb's first motion picture, entitled "Somewhere in Georgia," will be given this afternoon in the Candler Building for representatives of the press.

By means of a special process of projection recently perfected by Jean the Woodman, for which Geraldine Farrar acted the rôle of the French saint, will be shown on the screen synchronously with "Mothers of France" at the Rialto next week. The latter is the picture for which Sarah Bernhardt acted.

KILL WEST SIDE PLAN IS THOMPSON'S PLEA

ASSAILS LAND-GRANT TERMS

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 6.—Senator George F. Thompson, Chairman of the Joint Legislative Committee, made public today a report of that committee assailing the contract sought by the New York Central for its proposed changes on the west side, New York City. The contract, the committee contends, would alienate large areas of waterfront, prevent other railroads from entering the city by giving the Central a monopoly, and bestow upon that corporation, in violation of the Charter, rights never contemplated in the enabling act passed by the Legislature in 1911.

The committee also charges public officials with having issued misleading statements as to the scope of the plans, especially as to the treatment of Riverside Park, and urges that the act which empowered the Board of Estimate to treat with the New York Central be repealed. Attention is directed to the alleged largesse of some of the city's representatives to grant public lands to the railroad, and a new act is suggested which "will limit the use of public property and facilities to that which is absolutely necessary for the public improvement sought and no more."

By constructing tunnels and subways, the report goes on, the "objectionable and dangerous crossings of the New York Central Railroad Company along the west side of New York City could be eliminated, and enlarged provisions for service could be made without injuring the parks and without alienating invaluable public properties."

The Joint Legislative Committee originally was appointed to investigate the Public Service Commission, but decided that the negotiations between the Board of Estimate and the Central also came within its jurisdiction, and made a separate report. The committee contends that Chapter 777 of the Laws of 1911, (generally known as the Enabling act,) was a local and private act, and as such was prohibited by the Constitution from bestowing any such rights as sought by the railroad.

"The contract formulated under its provisions permits the acquiring of a new and wider roadbed," the report reads in part, "additional lands along the waterfront, additional lands under water, additional tracks, additional terminals, the closing of many streets, the suggestion of an extension to Battery Park.

Exclusive Privilege Charged.

"The whole scheme results in exclusive privilege, viz: because of its location it gives the New York Central Railroad access to the whole west side waterfront, to the exclusion of other railroad corporations, through ownership of a large part thereof and location of its tracks and terminals along the remainder thereof in such manner as to exclude any other corporation from opportunity for the use of such docking privileges; it provides for the building of an elevated freight railroad with perpetual easements in streets, and shuts the people out and away from the waterfront, and provides new terminals with immense trackage, and shuts out competition with other trunk line railroads and prevents other railroads from having adequate terminals in Manhattan Island, and provides no right of recapture or power to terminate the occupancy, and provides for the turning over to the railroad lands which the city now owns, and provides for closing more than sixty streets, and makes no provision whatever for protection of the rights of the public to make special franchise assessments."

Mr. Thompson's committee expresses the belief that the prices placed upon the lands the city would convey to the railroad are inadequate, that bulkhead lines would be drawn in so far as to leave a margin too narrow for the construction of a municipally-owned road, that the railroad would come into possession of a "feudal estate" of which it could never be divested, that it would be in a position to refuse to operate its trains or a more extensive scale, that to sell electricity for private use, and that it could demand the right to connect its freight line rails with the Grand Central Terminal by constructing a crosstown road.

The committee calls attention to the efforts being made by citizens of New Jersey to obtain a lower freight rate than New York, and emphasizes the importance of a free waterfront enabling the city to meet competition, and continues its report thus:

"But New York needs the service, as well, of the other great railroads—the Pennsylvania, the Baltimore & Ohio, and the Central Railroad of New Jersey, the Erie, the Lehigh Valley, the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western—the terminals of which are established on the west bank of the Hudson River.

In conclusion the committee suggests:

"It is recommended that Chapter 777 of the Laws of 1911 be repealed and that new legislation be passed, giving the local authorities sufficient power to provide for the elimination of dangerous grade operations by railroads, and limiting the exercise of that power in such manner as shall protect the State and municipal corporation from overenthusiasm of its local officers in regard to important details.

"Inasmuch as it appears that local authorities are likely to take more interest in providing for grants of city property to private corporations engaged in public service than is apparently taken in the same transaction by the officers of the corporation involved, it is suggested that the Legislature in the act provide such limitations and restrictions as will limit the use of public property and facilities to that which is absolutely necessary for the public improvement sought, and no more."

Land Valuation Board Meets.

The committee appointed by the Public Service Commission to examine the value of lands sought to be exchanged by the city and the New York Central Railroad for the relocation of tracks on the west side, held its first conference with the Committee on Port and Terminal Facilities in Controller Prendergast's office yesterday. In addition to the members of the Committee on Port and Terminal Facilities, the conference was attended by Public Service Commissioners Whitney, Hervey and Hodge. Mayor Mitchel took an active part in the discussion.

"It is appreciated by all concerned that the proposed contract with the New York Central Railroad Company suggests a great many important questions," Controller Prendergast said, after the conference was over, "and these have many important ramifications. As was natural, our first meeting was confined to a general discussion, and no conclusions of any kind were arrived at. The meeting was of the most harmonious character, a very helpful spirit being exhibited by the members of the Public Service Commission toward the subject in hand."

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 7, 1917

GERMAN REASONING OUTDONE BY AUSTRIA.

The Austro-Hungarian Government, earnestly desiring to avoid a breach of relations with the United States, yet not daring to break with Germany, dispatches to the Government at Washington a note in which, while in fact seeking to justify assassination at sea by submarine, it employs terms and arguments pertinent only to a discussion of legitimate cruiser warfare and offers to the examination of a candid world a process of reasoning that surpasses in hardihood the most daring exploits of the German mind during the whole course of the war. In the main argument the mention of submarines is skillfully and consistently avoided, and by that device Germany's ally is able to cite uncontested principles of international law, to refer to positions taken by our Government, to appeal to reason, right, and justice with an appearance of plausibility sufficient to convince minds unwary enough not to perceive that reasoning entirely appropriate to a defense of legitimate methods of warfare at sea is irrelevant, meaningless, and void when resorted to in justification of submarine forays against merchant ships. It is as if the right to take property by eminent domain should be cited in justification of common theft.

The author of the note is at his worst when, in perhaps the clumsiest attempt at subtlety ever made in a serious diplomatic communication, he seeks to maintain the thesis that the warning which the Austrian Government admits must be given to ships of commerce before they are attacked is valid and sufficient whether given to the crew and passengers immediately before the attack or issued before the departure of the vessel which is to be sunk—as in the well-remembered case of the Lusitania—or through a general notification that merchant ships will incur the risk of destruction if they venture within a barred zone. This is not true, of course, even of cruiser warfare; as applied to submarines, the theory has been repudiated by our Government with emphasis and iteration. It is not applicable even in the case of enemy merchantmen, yet the Austrian Government prides itself on not having sunk "one enemy merchantman "without previous, if only general, "warning."

It is contended in this note that the principles of humanity would be better observed by timely warning "against using endangered vessels." Starting from this assumption, the argument proceeds easily and naturally to an impudent proffer of advice to our Government that it should warn American citizens to take to the seas, if at all, only in neutral vessels, thus avoiding the danger inseparable from travel on passenger ships of the enemy. In view of the fact that Germany has notified us of her purpose to sink all ships within the barred zone, neutral and enemy alike, making exception only in favor of one American ship a week bestriped like a painted Indian, with a port which no American passenger ships visit as its only permitted destination, this piece of cool counsel certainly assumes on our part a state of mind remarkably responsive to the Teutonic point of view.

There is one highly unfortunate reference in the note. It cites with approval the expression of the hope made at the Second Hague Conference that the time might come when "the law "enforced for war on land should be "employed, so far as this was possible, also for war on sea." Our representatives at both Hague Conferences were instructed to "propose to "the Conference the principle of extending to strictly private property "at sea the immunity from destruction or capture by belligerent powers which such property always enjoys on land as worthy of being incorporated in the permanent law of "civilized nations." The German principle, and Austria's note is merely an argument in support of that principle, is that private property of enemies and neutrals alike may be destroyed at sea without any of those preliminaries of warning and sparing of human life that civilization and humanity demand.

The note makes much of the argument that inasmuch as neutrals venture at their own risk within the sphere of warlike operations on land, therefore it is obvious that if they venture into the neighborhood of warlike operations at sea they must blame nobody but themselves. No neutral ventures within the sphere of warlike operations at sea, when those operations are conducted in accordance with rules of law everywhere recognized except by Germany and her allies. But this is the foundation vice of the Austrian argument, a vice that destroys it from beginning to end. Submarine warfare upon merchant ships is not lawful, the decree proclaiming the barred zones and Germany's intentions therein was issued in brazen defiance of all law, and our Government has repeatedly so declared. The Austrian mind does, indeed, leave the German mind hopelessly in the rear when it resorts to arguments like these and puts analogy to such uses.

Austria declares that "the assurance given in the Ancona case," that "enemy private vessels so far as they "do not flee or offer resistance shall "not be destroyed before the persons "aboard are secured," has not been "abolished nor restricted" by the Barred Zone decree of Jan. 31, 1917. That assurance, so far as it goes, is welcome. But the whole argument of the Austrian note, and it is a very long note, is an endeavor to sustain the contrary principle, that we cannot complain of the unwarned destruction of ships within the barred zone, that Germany was warranted and justified in issuing the proclamation of Jan. 31, in short that we must keep our ships out of the area of danger or take the consequences. The chief encouragement we can derive from the Austrian note, its highest significance, is the reason it gives us for believing that Austria is very far from being at one with Germany in accepting the proclamation of unrestricted submarine warfare as either expedient or safe. Germany's communications on this subject are curt, brusque, uncompromising. Her ally, Austria, argues at great length, and with what her Foreign Minister evidently regards as plausibility, in justification. The prolixity and the nature of the note are clear evidence that Austria dreads a break with the United States. She has enemies enough already, she is hard pressed, like a panting and exhausted runner in a race she would be only too glad to retire from the contest. She is overawed by Germany, her new Emperor has not the will or the courage to declare himself a free man; the great Austrian Empire is and apparently will remain a vassal State subject to the German will.

MILITARY TRAINING IN NEW YORK

Measures for national defense in the various States should be supplementary to the plans of the Federal Government, but while the nation is without a general law for universal training such action as that taken yesterday by the Legislature of New York in amending the Slater bill of last year is of vast importance to the whole country. This amendment, which provides for the military training of all able-bodied youths in New York State, not merely of schoolboys, between the ages of 16 and 19 years, was adopted by the Assembly by a vote of 82 to 5 and by the Senate unanimously. No doubt remains of the attitude of this State in regard to general military training. The law as amended provides for the substitution in some cases of such vocational training as will fit young men for State service. With the operation of this law, under the Military Training Commission, and the continuation next Summer of the training camps at Plattsburg, in which 50,000 men are expected to take part, New York will be doing its full duty to the nation. The development of the National Guard will not be hindered. Under the proposed plan of the General Staff, if that is enacted by the Sixty-fifth Congress, Federal assistance to the present organized militia will be continued for five years.

Senator THEODORE DOUGLAS ROBINSON, in urging the acceptance of his bill for a military census of the State, spoke with feeling when he said that "we cannot count upon the Federal "Government to do anything concrete "in time to be of real service," but not with the best judgment. The indications are that his bill will be passed.

THE RAILWAYS AND TAXATION.

Nobody can hold the railways to blame for the taxes they have to pay. Nor is there any general appreciation how the many local and national taxes mount up in the aggregate. The Pennsylvania Railway's report brings the facts out into bold relief. Last year the company's taxes increased 19 per cent., an increase in ten years of 129 per cent. Inasmuch as railway taxes were never less than those of other taxpayers, an increase of 129 per cent. is like another inch on a man's nose. If it was previously a long nose, the additional inch seems a yard. Taxes now take 14 cents out of each dollar of operating revenue, compared with 8 cents ten years ago, when already taxes were complained of.

The ten-year comparison is significant. It was ten years ago that there was another railway embargo, and the necessity of relaxing unreasonable repression of railway profits has not yet been appreciated. Also, the year reported was an exceptionally good one for railway earnings, so that the relation between railway earnings and taxation is minimized. Yet the experience of other railways is like that of the Pennsylvania. According to the latest report of the Interstate Commerce Commission, in the ten years from 1906 to 1915, inclusive, the taxes of all railways increased from $74,785,615 to $141,238,488. The increase of taxes alone was more than the increase asked for in the advanced rate case, of which a pitiful portion only was allowed. Earnings increased as well as taxes, but the tax increase was so much greater that the per cent. of taxes to earnings for all railways rose from less than 10 per cent. to over 16 per cent. That the railways had to contend with many other increases of expenses is known to everybody.

The system of regulation is no more responsible for the steady increase of burdens put on the railways than are the railways themselves. But the regulators have not shown perception of their duty to protect the railways in the public interest as well as to regulate them. The people and the lawmakers are more responsible for the increase of taxes than either the railways or their regulators. They have acted as though it was the duty of the railways to bear public burdens, since they are public utilities. That is an inheritance from the time when exceptional favor was shown to the railways. Then their rates were too high and their profits thought excessive. That time is past. Railway profits are now too small for the public interest. There is a deficiency of the supply of transportation and an arrest of its increase. Meanwhile the country is growing, and the outlook is for worse conditions than the present.

PATRIOTS AND THE ELEVEN.

The State Legislatures are evincing the loyalty and patriotic resolve of the people to stand by the President and the United States; and the eleven Senators who conspired against their country are hearing its verdict, and that of their own States, on their conduct. Minnesota has rendered hers on the resonant, empty MOSES EDWIN CLAPP, whose place in the Senate has been taken by an American. Mr. GRONNA finds no friends in North Dakota outside of a small German element. The Legislature has expressed its confidence in Mr. WILSON. The Legislature of Mr. NORRIS'S Nebraska has done the same, and a resolution has been introduced declaring that his opposition to the Armed Ship bill does not "voice the sentiment of Nebraska "nor reflect the patriotic judgment of "its citizens."

The recall exists in Oregon, and its loyal citizens are determined to use it, if it can be used, to return Senator LANE to private life. The Legislature of Mr. KIBBY'S Arkansas has passed unanimously a resolution approving Mr. WILSON'S international policy. By a likewise unanimous vote of praise for Senator ROBINSON, Mr. KIBBY'S colleague, for his support of the Armed Ship bill, both houses politely condemn Mr. KIBBY, who seems to stand alone.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE was re-elected to his third term in the Senate in 1916 by a majority of 116,000 over his Democratic opponent. He was assisted in his nomination and election by Democratic, Republican, Progressive, and Socialist votes. He has been in public life for more than a generation; and though the State has grown weary of the expensive reforms begun under his Governorship and continued by his disciples, though the days of his absolute boss-ship are passed, the subventions of Uncle ISAAC STEPHENSON cut off, and the State Republican organization has gone into other hands, and his hold upon the people has been weakening, his salience, eccentricity, and volubility, his conspicuity in the Senate, his gift of advertising, have made him a "character," jeered at sometimes, but tolerated, even prized, as a sort of State "institution." There is, fortunately, nobody quite like him; and Wisconsin stuck to him from old habit.

Secure in his new mandate, he promptly abused it. He loves to stage himself in melodramatic parts; and the share of vanity in his recent performance there is no egometer to register. But this time he is unforgivable. Nearly three weeks ago the Wisconsin Legislature passed a resolution telling Mr. WILSON that the people of Wisconsin were loyal to him and supported him. When the Zimmermann intrigue was made known, many of Mr. LA FOLLETTE'S personal friends sent him telegrams urging him to support the President. The Faculty of the University of Wisconsin supports the President. LA FOLLETTE was condemned by a meeting of 4,000 Milwaukeeans. Even German-language newspapers condemned him. He would not relent. He has stretched the patience of his State too far at last. His last term has begun.

STONE, the most malevolent and disloyal of the eleven, is hearing from his people. Not the mighty-maned VARDAMAN, but WILLIAMS, the patriotic WILLIAMS, represents the sentiment of Mississippi.

The Ohio and Kentucky Legislatures denounce the filibusters. Everywhere the national sentiment, balked by the Eleven, utters itself strongly and clearly. The course of the Legislatures, the public meetings, the signature of memorials by associations of business men and by such bodies as the University of Wisconsin, even such regrettable and foolish acts as hangings in effigy, recall 1861 and the passionate patriotism that then flamed over the North. The patriotism of 1917 is nation-wide.

Mr. O'GORMAN, Mr. VARDAMAN, and Mr. KENYON have waked up too late to the consequences of their course on the Armed Ship bill and are trying to wriggle out, evade, or confess and avoid. The record is made up. From whatever motives and with whatever of activity or passivity, they opposed the full maintenance of American rights. They have been judged, and their appeal fails.

FOOD CROPS.

The price of wheat has recently advanced, owing to a foreign demand which led the British Government to offer 90 cents a bushel for ocean transportation and to reports about farm reserves. These, a leading crop expert says, are only 98,000,000 bushels, against 241,000,000 a year ago, and the quantity available for export before the new crop comes is, in his opinion, less than 40,000,000 bushels. Secretary HOUSTON says that 164,000,000 bushels was the exportable surplus at the beginning of the crop year. All the estimates show that the quantity which can be sold to foreign buyers will probably be exhausted before the next harvest. While last year's crop of wheat was about 90,000,000 bushels below the five years' average, the yield of corn was only slightly deficient. But in recent months there have been large exports of corn, and the price is very high. Farm reserves are reported to be 785,000,000 bushels, against 1,133,000,000 bushels at this date in 1916. There was wheat crop shortage last year all over the world, the reduction having been 25 per cent. In Argentina a failure of all the cereals has affected one of Europe's sources of supply. We had only about two-thirds of a crop of potatoes. There were deficiencies elsewhere and prices are without precedent.

As the time for planting approaches, our farmers should be moved by the prevailing price figures, last year's deficit, and the persistent demand from abroad for American foodstuffs, to increase their food acreage. The area given to Winter wheat has been slightly enlarged, but not all the reports as to condition are favorable. What will be done in the Spring wheat States remains to be seen. The financial argument for greater potato acreage should be convincing. Our farmers' expenses are much higher than they were before the war, on account of the cost of what they must buy and of the wages they are required to pay. And it is difficult to get the workmen who are needed. But there is good reason to expect that the prices of their products will continue to be high, even if peace should come. There will be profit in additional acreage, and our farmers should strive to make large crops this year.

GOVERNMENT REBATES ANNULLED.

The Supreme Court yesterday annulled the rebate of 5 per cent. discount from customs rates on imports in American bottoms. The rebate was granted in the Underwood tariff, not for the sake of the importers, but for the sake of stimulating American shipping. Nevertheless, the importers claimed that the rebate should be allowed to the shipping of all nations which have treaties with the United States for equal or favored nation treatment. The Board of Appraisers limited the rebate to American bottoms. The Treasury refused the rebate to American bottoms, taking the view of the Supreme Court yesterday. The Customs Court of Appeals extended the rebate to the trade with twenty-two treaty nations. The Supreme Court now sustains the Treasury's original position, which had been overruled.

Inasmuch as the practice under the statute has been as contradictory as the litigation under it, estimates of the importance of the case to the Treasury cannot be reconciled. They run into scores of millions. As the Treasury actually was compelled to make a refund of eight millions in the hat band case, this litigation had serious aspects in either view of the matter. According to the Government's brief, goods in American bottoms were valued in the first year of the law at $193,000,000. The rebate on that sum was endurable. But the goods in the ships of treaty nations were valued at $890,000,000, and that was different. The upshot is that the Treasury will not have to rebate anything. It is a fortunate windfall in a time of need.

The trouble arose from the fact that Congress enacted inconsistent things with its eyes open. That is proved by the further provision that the inconsistent provisions should be construed consistently. That was nonsense and impossible, as the Supreme Court decides. Moreover, Congress has a record of legislating in that manner. It violated a sheaf of treaties by the seamen's law. It violated another set of treaties by the Canadian wood pulp legislation. In this manner it has given such offense that even France has threatened retaliation in defense of its rights, and Germany has demanded what we gave to others. In these and other cases Congress has endangered the consistency of the United States in all its favored nation treaties. We have both demanded favored nation treatment from other nations as a right and contended that we gave favored nation treatment only where we pleased, and as the result of a bargain for a consideration. When other matters cease to be so pressing, there will be sequels to our favored nation procedure.

A Closed Chapter Reopened.

It is to be regretted that a man as well-intentioned as JEFFERSON T. BUSH, and particularly one who has reached a sound conclusion as to the rights and wrongs of the European war, should have had at the Carnegie Hall meeting the painful experience of finding himself the object of a vehemently hostile demonstration by several thousand other well-intentioned and right-thinking fellow-citizens. The mistake that Mr. BUSH made, however—the mistake, that invited and indeed rendered inevitable, if it did not exactly compel, what was, after all, a manifestation of impatience rather than of animosity—was that of presenting, as if it were still unsettled, a question upon which his hearers had already reached a definite and fixed decision.

There was less than no use in telling them that in the opinion of some people Germany is a Fatherland struggling against oppression—in other words, that Germany went to war in self-defense. Of course there are some people who think that, or at least who say it, but the people whom Mr. BUSH was addressing were representative of the multitude of Americans who have carefully considered all the facts in the case and convinced themselves that though Germany may now—fortunately—be fighting for existence under her present rulers and her present form of government, she started the war for the very different reason of extending her domination over a considerable part of the world.

As Mr. BUSH, when he could make himself heard, announced that he, too, was pro-Ally and not pro-German, it is evident that he accepts the second of these views of the war, and not the first. Why, therefore, could he not have treated that chapter as closed? It is not, really, the mark of a "judicial mind" to deliberate endlessly on a given situation or congeries of facts, and while it is, of course, well to hear both sides of a case before deciding it, after both sides have been heard the Judge or the jury decides. The proper thing to do then is not to continue arguing, but to pronounce and execute sentence.

Mr. BUSH had no new evidence to present as the basis of an appeal, and his repetition of arguments long since refuted was naturally irritating to hearers who believed that the time had come to act on decisions already reached.

Security Hardly Complete.

While defending in the Reichstag, yesterday, his attempt to bring about a conjoined attack on the United States by Mexico and Japan, in case of war between the United States and Germany, Dr. ZIMMERMANN, the German Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, said much that is hard to understand, but perhaps the most puzzling passage in his speech as cabled was the one in which he referred to the transmission of his now famous note of instructions to the Kaiser's representative in Washington. "For the dispatch of these instructions," he said, "a secure way was chosen, which at present is at Germany's disposal."

But it is evident to all the world, now, that the way chosen was the very reverse of "secure," as the note, instead of remaining in the hands of the officials for whom it was intended, in some as yet undisclosed manner fell into those of the American Government and then received the publicity which has made so much trouble for its authors. If that is a "secure" way, one cannot help wondering what ways are insecure, and it is a cause for still greater wonder that Dr. ZIMMERMANN spoke of this particular way as still at Germany's disposal. One would imagine that he would be looking out for others, if he has any more such notes to send.

Mystifying, too, is the fact that Dr. ZIMMERMANN, and all except a few of the other German commentators on the note in question, can see nothing in it to excite Americans or anybody else, and even now regret only that their plot was discovered and thereby foiled before the time came for carrying it out. It still seems to them both practicable and commendable—the performance of a patriotic duty. But that is natural enough, perhaps, since the only criticism received for which Dr. ZIMMERMANN cares anything has come from others who also think his one offense lay in getting found out. He is blamed for lack of skill in the conduct of underground negotiations, not for the negotiations themselves. Hence is it that his only expression of sorrow is over the fact that the Americans could decipher the special code in which it was written.

Yet he must know that, with time and a sufficiency of text on which to work, every cipher code can be translated by the experts in such work.

Greenwich Village Is Grieved.

Greenwich's villagers have good ground for complaint that the new magazine issued by and for society, instead of sticking closely to the task of explaining and defending itself, should have wandered off into an attack on the amiable young men and women who live in the vicinity of Washington Square. A joke is a joke, but twitting on facts is not a joke—it is unkind, and therefore, on The Chronicle's own showing, unmannerly and unworthy of occupants of high social circles.

The charge that the villagers are all self-conscious may be true; at any rate, they would not even attempt to refute it; but the assertion that they are all idlers and posers—and nothing else—cannot be true, for The Chronicle itself says that "their more successful and earnest colleagues long since winged north to the more comfortable surroundings of modern buildings." That emigration from the village is a reality, but is it not a continuous process, rather than one completed in the past?

And what does "more successful" mean, anyhow? Making money, apparently, in The Chronicle's opinion, and some artists who are not idlers and posers would deny that it put on the witness stand.

His Idea of Training.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

An interview with the man who makes my furnace so completely illustrates the present attitude of this country on military preparedness that I believe it should have a little wider notice. We had agreed that there was a chance of trouble and he tapped his chest and said: "I am ready to go if they want me." He was wearing the regulation olive drab shirt, and while I knew he was not in the militia at present, it occurred to me he might have been and I asked him if he had ever served. His reply is enlightening: "No, but I have hunted rabbits a lot." At present I am engaged in wondering how much rabbit hunting is necessary as a preparation for national defense.

PRISONERS IN FRANCE.

American Ambulance Driver Answers German Charges.

New York, March 6, 1917.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The German Minister of War is quoted in a Berlin dispatch as saying that German prisoners are tortured by the French and kept behind the lines under fire. Why not inaugurate a policy of printing the truth beside each German dispatch received? The true explanation of this latest dispatch is that the German reserves are too few or unwilling to do the necessary road and communication trench repairing close behind the firing lines, because they find the French and English fire too hot, so the German Government has decided to bring up the French prisoners to do this work for them. What is easier than to find an excuse to justify it?

I can and do brand as a falsehood any statement that German prisoners are tortured or compelled to work behind the French lines under fire.

Over six months' service on the French fronts as an ambulance driver of the American Red Cross, attached to a French division in the sector through which the largest number of German prisoners have been passed (about 15,000,) thousands of whom I have seen and hundreds of whom I have talked to, gives me authority for what I say. The French use only their older men for work close behind the lines, and I have never seen a German prisoner in the fire zone doing anything but traveling toward the rear. Night and day I have been on the roads in the fire zone, and there isn't a prison camp or citadel that cannot be and has not been visited by our ambulance drivers. We have had eighty men in service with forty cars at Verdun during December, and never a tale from any man of any such atrocity as is quoted in this speech.

The first assembling camp for prisoners of war is well out of gun range, well kept and comfortable, and I have been through it often. The prisoners are immediately fed on arrival, with the regular French army ration and all the bread they can eat. I never saw or heard of a Frenchman abusing or ill-treating a German prisoner, but on the contrary have seen hundreds of little acts of kindness shown them. Everything is open to us foreign ambulance drivers, and we are treated as part of the French army. It is absolutely false that German officers are locked in cages, &c., for I have seen them confined in comfortable houses and allowed exercise and good food.

The whole speech is merely to try to justify an improper use of prisoners of war and to prevent the ever increasing number of voluntary German surrenders.

The French do not need to stoop to deny such lies, for there are now hundreds of good American citizens who have been to France and have seen how everything is conducted behind the French lines, and so can disprove for them all such slanders.

PHILIP O. MILLS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Senator Lodge is one of the group in Congress who hold that the President has no authority to arm merchant ships without first obtaining authority from Congress. Speaking on this subject on last Friday the Senator from Massachusetts said:

In the statutes of the United States we have a provision permitting merchant vessels to arm and defend themselves; but it expressly provides that they must not defend themselves against the armed public vessels of a nation with which we are at amity. Technically we are at amity with Germany now; and if we arm these vessels, or if they arm themselves, and then make resistance to a German vessel, be she cruiser or submarine, and if they fail in that resistance and are made prisoners, under our own statutes they can be deemed pirates and treated in that way because of that particular exception in the statute of 1819.

Senator Lodge is putting a strained construction on the word "amity." According to international law, when two nations have suspended diplomatic relations indefinitely there is no warrant for the use of the word amity in speaking of the state of affairs existing between them. On the contrary, the relations are nonamicable. Nonamicable relations are in diplomatic terms the opposite of amicable. Germany is not at present, therefore, a nation with which the United States is at amity. If old statutes are to be invoked as the sole legal ground for opposing the power of the President to defend our rights by arming American merchant ships, a law other than that to which Senator Lodge refers will have to be resurrected.

I am Belgian born, a naturalized American citizen. I used to be quite proud of this new citizenship, but recent events somehow make me feel that I would like to tell Uncle Sam that there has been a misdeal somewhere and that I want to hand him back his papers. Who could help, in my place, drawing a parallel between the miserable wrangle in the United States Senate and the historical address of King Albert in August, 1914, to the representatives of his people, who, in one solid mass, spurned the ignoble deal offered by Germany though they knew it meant the sacrifice of all save honor? Have I not deserted a big people for a small people, not going by the map? And am I unfaithful to my adopted country if I am prouder of the little strip of territory that is still unin-vaded Belgian soil than of this vast continent?

Too Much for Simplicissimus.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"Make peace with Japan," says Zimmermann from his high window in Wilhelmstrasse to his Ambassador to Mexico, "help Mexico to conquer America." "We leave the details entirely to you." Upon reading that last sentence, it is rumored, Simplicissimus, the last alleged humorous paper in Germany, let the office cat quietly out of the front door, discharged the janitor, and vanished utterly from the face of the earth.

Dr. Wise's Name Unauthorized.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In THE TIMES of Monday, March 5, I find some correspondence between a group of gentlemen and Colonel Roosevelt. Among the signatories of the communication to Colonel Roosevelt, my own name is given. I beg to state that I never saw that letter until its publication, that the use of my name was unauthorized and unwarranted, and that, in protest against this inexcusable action on the part of some representative of the Congress of Forums, I have resigned from its Directorate.

I've taken, O merchants—

Unintentional Incursion Into Diplomacy Credited with Important Results.

H. L. Mencken in The New York World.

Reuter, the English press agency, did yeoman service while the opportunity lasted. Germans were systematically inflamed with wild tales of what was going on in the United States, and with even wilder inferences. They were made to believe their ships were being seized, the crews thereof imprisoned and German citizens subjected to oppressive espionage.

Even the safe return of Count von Bernstorff and the German Consuls, they were told, was in doubt.

The result was that the Foreign Office suffered a mild panic, and the passports of Mr. Gerard and many other Americans with him were temporarily held up. * * *

Suddenly the tension broke, and it was all over. The business was done by a telegram from the Managing Editor of a New York paper to its Berlin correspondent. It ran to no more than 200 words, but in that short space disposed of practically all the buncombe printed in Berlin for a week.

The German merchant ships in American harbors, it said, were not seized; Bernstorff was not held up; the property of Germans was not in danger. The correspondent hurried with this dispatch to the embassy, and Mr. Gerard sent him to the Foreign Office at once. That afternoon—it was Friday of that melodramatic week—the news was printed in all the Berlin papers.

An hour later there was no longer any blood upon the moon. Mr. Gerard had his passports; all was serene in the Foreign Office; there was handshaking all around. Next morning it was officially announced Mr. Gerard and his party would leave Berlin at 8 P. M. for Zurich, and that a special train was put at his disposal.

The dispatch mentioned above was cabled by THE TIMES on Feb. 7 to its correspondents in Berlin, by way of London. One of these, Oscar King Davis, took it to the Foreign Office, which caused it to be published throughout Germany. THE TIMES dispatch having been referred to so frequently by Berlin correspondents, the text is herewith supplied:

If possible send freely detention Gerard and other Americans in Germany. Only reasons received here are contained in Copenhagen dispatch to NEW YORK TIMES, supplied to our correspondent by American Legation there. These reasons amazingly absurd and there's astonishment and indignation that they could be believed in Germany. Bernstorff is safe and free to go as soon as ship available. No German ships have been seized by military or naval authorities, no German sailors arrested. Sailors wishing to leave ships have been required to go to immigrant station and enter country through that in usual way. Crews of interned German cruisers were removed from them and cared for as measure of safety. Kronprinzessin Cecilie has been seized in long-standing civil suit at Boston, but that was to prevent damage which might lessen her value as surety for suitor's claim. As for other German ships, Government has announced officially that it will not take them over and Germans free to do as please with them. This represents everything that has happened here in relation to Germans and German ships.

BIPARTISAN CONGRESS PLAN

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Bi-partisan organization of the incoming House, with Champ Clark as Speaker and the committee memberships and patronage equally divided, is being discussed by Democratic and Republican leaders as a possibility in the event the five independent members hold up public business in the next session by attempting to dictate how the House shall be organized.

The independents thus far have declined to align themselves with either of the big parties and have held several secret caucuses. If they vote as a unit, as it now appears they may, they can delay business in the House just as long as party lines are maintained. At best neither Democrats nor Republicans will have more than 215 party members, and 218 are required to elect a Speaker, except by special agreement.

In case of a deadlock, many Democrats and Republicans believe it would be their patriotic duty in the face of an international crisis to break down party lines regardless of political fortunes. The desire of the House to keep its record clear of any charge of tying President Wilson's hands as the Senate did is expected to play a big part in converting members to the bi-partisan proposal. It is a House boast that a large majority of its membership always has stood behind the President in the many crises of the last three years.

Nearly every leader of importance on either side has been sounded for his views on the bi-partisanship plan, and no vigorous opponent of it as a last resort has been found. Republican Leader Mann is quoted as saying recently at a dinner to redfring New York members of the House that he had rather see bi-partisan control of the House than to see it controlled by a small band of "filibusters."

Democrats learned with pleasure today that contrary to precedent in New York, Governor Whitman probably would call a special election soon for the selection of a successor to the late Representative Conry, Democrat, who came from a strong Tammany district. While attending the inauguration Governor Whitman discussed the situation with several Republican leaders, and although it appeared certain that a special election would add another Democrat to the incoming House, making it stand a tie at 215 members each, they advised him to call it. Failure to call a special election at this time, he was told, would set a precedent which Democratic Governors of States with Republican Representatives might have opportunities to follow.

START FIXING PAPER PRICE.

Large Staff Put to Work by Trade Commission on Details.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—The Federal Trade Commission put a large staff at work today on details for fixing news print paper prices. Many publishers of the country, not represented in recent conferences here, must be induced to enter the arbitration arrangement before it is a success, and additional manufacturers must be persuaded to cooperate in the plan.

The price of $2.50 a hundred pounds in carload lots, named by the commission Sunday, is expected by the commission to give general satisfaction to publishers, some of whom have been paying twice that.

WOMEN WIN IN ARKANSAS.

Governor Signs Bill Which Permits Them to Vote at Primaries.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., March 6.—The Arkansas House of Representatives today, by a vote of 54 to 27, finally passed the Riggs Suffrage bill, which gives women the right to vote in primary elections. Governor Brough signed the bill tonight at a suffrage mass meeting.

The bill empowers women to vote at party primaries, after paying their poll taxes and swearing to support candidates of their party. It also provides that women must all suffrage qualifications required of male voters. Proponents of the bill say it is the next step to full equal suffrage, as nominations in this State at the Democratic primaries always mean election.

RETURNS $30,000,000 DUTY TO IMPORTERS

LONG FIGHT OVER CLAUSE

WASHINGTON, March 6.—The clause in the tariff law granting a 5 per cent. discount in duties to imports brought in American ships or inferentially in ships of nations with which the United States has favored nation treaties, was annulled today as unconstitutional by the Supreme Court. Through Justice Holmes the court held that the discount clause, designed to aid in upbuilding the American merchant marine, was inoperative altogether because it conflicted with existing treaties. It was held inapplicable both to American vessels and to those of the twenty-two foreign nations having favored nation treaties with the United States.

Pending decision of the case the regular duties were collected, until the Federal Treasury amassed between $25,000,000 and $30,000,000, which has been held ready to return to importers in case the court decided the clause invalid.

The discount clause provides "that a discount of 5 per centum on all duties imposed by this act shall be allowed on such goods, wares, and merchandise as shall be imported in vessels admitted to registration under the laws of the United States, provided that nothing in this sub-section shall be construed as to abrogate or in any manner impair or affect the provisions of any treaty concluded between the United States and any foreign nation."

The Attorney General held the clause void and inoperative as discriminatory and violative of treaties. Upon appeal of many New York importers the Board of Custom Appraisers held it operative only to imports in American ships. The importers appealed to the Customs Court, which held that the discount should be given not only upon such imports, but also upon those in vessels of the "treaty nations." From this ruling the Department of Justice appealed to the Supreme Court.

The Supreme Court's decision in the 5 per cent. rebate case was received with keen disappointment by importing interests of this city, as, barring the single exception of the hat trimmings case of a quarter of a century ago, the issue involved the largest amount in possible refunds on a single issue in the history of tariff litigation.

Just prior to the outbreak of the European war Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo ordered Collectors and other officers of the customs to treat the section as a nullity. Importers, however, managed to get a test case involving the validity of the law's section before the Board of General Appraisers.

The board held that the provision was applicable to goods imported in American bottoms, and not to merchandise entered in vessels of foreign nations. On appeal the United States Court of Customs Appeals reversed the board and the issue was then taken to the Supreme Court.

COMPENSATION LAW UPHELD.

Statutes of This and Other States Indorsed—Other Decisions.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—The laws of three States as to workmen's compensation to be paid in case of personal injury or death in the performance of duty were upheld by the United States Supreme Court today in cases brought up on appeal from New York, Iowa, and Washington States.

The general principles underlying the cases were practically the same. The Washington case differed from the others only in the matter of State insurance. The New York case was that of the New York Central Railroad Company against Sarah White, whose husband was accidentally killed while engaged as a watchman.

The widow instituted proceedings before the State Workemen's Compensation Commission, which found for her, in accordance with the law and the facts, and this ruling was affirmed by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court. This decree was affirmed by the New York State Court of Appeals.

The opinion was rendered by Justice Pitney. The court affirmed the decision of the Court of Appeals, sustaining the New York law, on the broad principle that he who expects to derive an advantage from an act done by another must answer for any injury the third person may sustain in such performance. It was held that there was no phase of the case which would make it an interstate commerce case, or bring it under the Federal compensation statute.

The court said that the New York act was intended to obtain a just settlement of a difficult problem, and that there was no defense against its operation from the contention that no fault of the employer entered into the casualty by which the employe lost his life. It was pointed out that there were many statutes imposing liability without fault, and they had been sustained by the courts.

The Supreme Court decided a number of other cases today. In the suit of Bond & Butterfield, New York cotton brokers, for recovery of $2,400 from J. L. Hume of Austin, Texas, upon a New York Cotton Exchange contract, the court held that the Texas Bucket Shop act does not prevent recovery by the brokers in the Texas Federal courts upon a "future" contract executed in New York.

The court sustained a judgment in a suit by Thomsen & Co., New York shippers, against Sir Charles W. Cayser and other British shipowners, for treble damages under the Sherman law for alleged combination of steamship shipping to South Africa in 1909.

The court refused to reopen or reconsider its recent decision in the Diggs-Caminetti white slave cases, and denied the application of F. Drew Caminetti of Sacramento for rehearing of its decree affirming his conviction. Mandates in the cases of Caminetti, Diggs, and L. T. Hare of Alva, Okla., putting their convictions into force, now will be issued.

PEACE PARTY OUSTS MRS. CARRIE CATT

HER PACIFISM QUESTIONED

Women Decide That Another Honorary Vice Chairman Is What They Really Must Have.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, President of the National Woman Suffrage Party, was ousted from the honorary Vice Chairmanship of the Women's Peace Party last night because she offered President Wilson the services of the suffragists of the country in case of war. This action was taken at the second annual dinner of the Peace Party, held at 11 East Forty-fourth Street. If had been announced that the policy of the Peace Party in the international crisis would be outlined, but it took so long to oust Mrs. Catt that the declaration of principles had to be postponed.

The dinner began early—at 6:30 o'clock—and after addresses by S. K. Radcliffe, English publicist, and a few others the election of officers was taken up. Newspaper reporters were not allowed at the session, but after it was over, at 11 o'clock, it was announced that Miss Crystal Eastman had been re-elected Chairman, and Mrs. Henry Villard, head of the Emergency Peace Federation, had been chosen Honorary Chairman.

The knowledge that Mrs. Catt had been an Honorary Vice Chairman brought the question, when the list of new officers was given out, of what had become of her. It was then explained that Mrs. Catt had not been re-elected because her pacifism wasn't 100 per cent. pure. It was also learned that when the time came for the election of Honorary Vice Chairman a slate was made up which included the name of Mrs. Catt, but on motion the slate lost.

It was recalled that Mrs. Catt had offered the services of the suffragists to the nation and the statement was made that she had usurped power in so doing without a referendum to the membership. Mrs. Margaret Lane said:

"We are first of all against war and have nothing to do with anything connected with the waging of war. Many of us are members of the National Woman Suffrage Party and resented our services being offered for any purpose until we consented. So, all together, it was decided that Mrs. Catt's pacifism wasn't strong enough for her name to appear as one of the officials of the Woman's Peace Party, and she wasn't re-elected. I hope she doesn't feel bad about it."

It was also learned that Mrs. Catt was not without friends, but the vote on ousting her was not made public. The following Vice Chairmen were elected: Mrs. Amos R. Pinchot, Miss Madeleine Z. Doty, and Mrs. James P. Warbasse. Mrs. Henry G. Leach was named Treasurer, and the following Honorary Vice Chairmen were elected: Mrs. Clara Clemens, Charlotte Perkins Gilman, Rutledge Hale, Mrs. A. M. La Monte, Mrs. Marie Jenney Howe, Miss Mary Shaw, Mrs. Charlotte Perkins Gilman, and Mrs. Florence Kelley.

After the new officers an attempt was made to place the Peace Party on record as to war policies, which brought a spirited debate. There was proposed a motion recommending that the State Department refuse passports to persons who intended to pass through the submarine war zone, but this was voted down. It was then decided to wait until some time next week to decide what the international policies of the party are.

RAE TANZER WEEPS IN COURT

Jury Warned Against Outbreaks by Osborne's Accuser.

Rae Tanzer, the former milliner's assistant who is being tried in the Federal District Court for perjury growing out of her $50,000 breach of promise suit against James W. Osborne, created a stir in court yesterday, the second day of the present trial, while Special Prosecutor William Rand, Jr., was opening the Government's case. She wept bitterly and jumped to her feet to deny statements he made in his opening address.

The jury did not seem to be impressed greatly. Mr. Rand had warned the members of the jury on Monday against such exhibits when, in selecting the talesman, he asked them if their judgment would be affected by "weepings and wailings, feigned or genuine."

Mr. Osborne came into the courtroom yesterday afternoon. It is probable that he will testify today. The afternoon session was taken up by former Assistant United States District Attorney Hershenstein, now a special prosecutor in the Tanzer case, who read into the record much of the defendant's testimony at the trial at which Franklin D. Safford was convicted of perjury.

HE PROPOSED 1,000 TIMES.

BOSTON, March 6.—Miss Viola Evelyn Trueman, a sixteen-year-old Roxbury girl, will be married March 28 to Harry G. Farnum, 34 years old, of 440 Riverside Drive, New York, to whom she was betrothed on her fifth birthday.

When Mr. Farnum was a student at Cornell he proposed on a visit to the Trueman home. Little Viola and Mrs. Trueman consented, but Mr. Trueman objected then and had been objecting ever since till recently, when he was won over by the combined pleadings of his wife, daughter, and prospective son-in-law.

Mr. Farnum, in telling of his engagement, said:

"When I asked Mrs. Trueman for her daughter's hand at the time Viola was only five, it wasn't a boyish prank, and she understood me as she has through these years, and consented. Her father tried to laugh my plan down. He has tried it for eleven years. Now, however, he knows I am serious, and admits that I was when I first popped the question. I believe I have been refused Viola's hand by her father at least 1,000 times."

Harry G. Farnum could not be reached at his apartment, 440 Riverside Drive, last night, and no one at that address could give any information concerning his approaching marriage.

PORTAL, REBEL CHIEF IN CUBA, SURRENDERS

MENOCAL IS CONFIDENT

Insurgents, He Says, Must Either Give Up or Be Driven Into the Sea.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, March 6.—The Liberal attempt against the Cuban Government received a severe shock tonight by the news that Pedro Sanchez del Portal, Liberal candidate for Governor of Santa Clara province and considered one of the mainstays of the rebels in Gomez's home province, had surrendered. Portal surrendered at Vijoitas and arrived tonight at Santa Clara under guard. He will be brought to Havana immediately.

Colonel Pujol reported today that many soldiers and some officers from the army were surrendering, all asserting they were forced against their wills to join the movement. Pujol reports that all sugar mills are grinding. He also reported that he expects to have the railroads and bridges repaired, so that passenger traffic between Cledo da Villa and Camagüey will probably be resumed Friday.

The troop movements reported today were unimportant, the rebels having scattered into such small bands that it is difficult to force them to an engagement with the regulars.

President Menocal made a statement tonight in which he denounced as greatly exaggerated, reports of the revolt now being given out in New York and Washington by revolutionary sympathizers. He declared that the insurgent in Oriente Province will either have to surrender or be driven into the sea.

President Menocal said in part:

"The general situation in Cuba could not be more satisfactory, in view of the special circumstances attending the seditious movement in progress. Complete order reigns in the provinces of Pinar del Rio, Havana, and Matanzas, as well as in the major portion of Santa Clara. Nearly all of Camagüey is dominated by the loyal forces under command of Colonel Pujol, and in Oriente the rebels are in possession of only Santiago and the surrounding territory.

"Every other district there, including Bayamo, Manzanillo, Puerto Padre, Holguin, Mayari, Victoria de las Tunas, Antilla, Baracoa, and Sagua de Tanamo is in the hands of the duly constituted authorities. Reference to the map will show what this means—that the Santiago rebels must either surrender or be driven into the sea."

AMERICAN OFFICER SIDES WITH REBELS

SANTIAGO, March 6.—The following proclamation has been issued by Commander Belknap, in charge of United States Naval affairs at Santiago:

"The civil Governor of the Province of Oriente, viewing with grave concern the extraordinary conditions prevailing in some parts of the province, due to a state of insurgency, and being moved by a sentiment of humanity to embrace available means for the restoration of normal conditions at the earliest possible moment for preventing widespread misery, disorder, and industrial disorganization, and having urgently requested my assistance and moral support, I hereby declare any military activity, beyond that necessary to restore and preserve order and tranquillity, prejudicial to the peace and welfare of the province. I further solemnly warn all persons against taking part in military operations in the Province of Oriente except under orders from the Military Commandant of the province.

"Persons under the command of said commandant against committing or taking part in any and every hostile act within the province and against advancing into this province with intent to disturb its peace, and every individual and subordinate leader of any body of men acting in disregard of this warning will be severally and collectively held responsible to the full extent of the law."

The Royal Bank of Canada has asked for protection for the American sugar mills at Santa Anna, in which it claims an interest to the amount of more than $1,000,000.

It is reported that the forces under Colonel Pablo Menocal, the President's brother, are marching from Bayamo toward the district where the mills are located, and are said to have destroyed the property of General Gonsales Flavell of the insurgent army, as well as other properties.

Menocal Cables Denial.

President Menocal sent a cablegram yesterday to Leopoldo Dolz, the Cuban Consul General here, denying the statement by Dr. Orestes Ferrara, the Liberal spokesman in this country, that Commander Reginald R. Belknap, in command of the naval forces at Santiago, had recognized the rebel General Fernandez as the military commander in control of the Province of Oriente.

Dr. Ferrara had been quoted as saying that Commander Belknap, acting for this Government, had signed an agreement with Fernandez guaranteeing fair elections and recognizing General Fernandez.

The assertion that the American Navy officer had recognized the rebel General was branded as untrue by Dolz.

President Wilson has already said that the Government of the United States would not treat with the rebels," he said. "The warships are there to protect American interests."

Quantities of machine guns, saddles, and ammunition have been purchased here by the Government, it was said. The call for volunteers has increased President Menocal's forces to about 30,000 men.

'VESTIGIAL VICE IN DANCE.'

Dr. Karl Reiland Sees Unlovely Jungle Antics in Modern Classics.

The Rev. Dr. Karl Reiland, rector of St. George's Episcopal Church, of which J. Pierpont Morgan is a communicant, arraigns the "jungle antics" of some modern dances in the weekly bulletin of the church, issued yesterday.

"The jungle antics, shoulder lurches, palm and arm pumping, the clasps, clutches and holds, seem in certain tolerated instances to suggest type reversions, a kind of ancestor worship, exhibiting a vestigial viciousness unlovely in our species," he writes.

Dr. Reiland adds that he does not dance, but is musician and psychologist enough to know that the "cow bell, hammer and tongs, box banging, whistle, rasp and rattle" music accompanying some of the modern dances has a "real effect on the moral substance of those habitually swayed by it."

"Those who understand dancing—as I do not—" he adds, "may find some scriptural satisfaction in a verse of the second book of Samuel, where it reads: 'And David danced before the Lord with all his might.' But our modern dancers cannot with solemn propriety elect dancing David as a kind of patron saint, for with him it was essentially a matter of religion, and that is certainly not the matter with them, however much they may go at it 'with all their might.'

"This comment indicts only a species and not the genus of dancing, for the modern has its virtues or you would not have so many of the best people using it. The bad form is the only point involved. Those old dances on the barn floor, after a corn husking, were religious experiences in comparison, with the capable fiddler, the characteristic calls, and the fascinating aspect of decorum, rhythm, and mirth. But now, what a cubistic mania has seized the musical instruments! It is a serious business these days, trekking back to the prehistoric or mid-African in men and music. But, then, I do not dance, no, not even as David did 'before the Lord with all his might.'"

CRUGER CLUE FROM JERSEY.

Police Investigate Report That Girl May Be in Tuckerton.

Assistant District Attorney John T. Dooling sent two detectives late yesterday to Tuckerton, N. J., to investigate a story told in a letter to Mrs. Henry D. Cruger, mother of the missing Ruth Cruger, that the young woman had taken a room in the New Jersey town. Though he had not heard from the detectives up to a late hour last night, Mr. Dooling was inclined to believe that the letter was but one of hundreds of worthless clues which have poured in at the Cruger home, the District Attorney's office, and the Fourth Branch since the girl disappeared. Mrs. Cruger hastened to Mr. Dooling's office immediately upon the receipt of the letter.

"Opposite Hartlett's," the Tuckerton informant wrote, "is a young woman who keeps to her room. She resembles photographs of your daughter which I have seen in the papers. Think it worth investigating." The note was evidently penned in great haste and was sent to Mrs. Cruger by special delivery.

A letter received by Mrs. Alfredo Cocchi, wife of the missing motorcycle repair man, purporting to have come from Ruth Cruger, and which assured Mrs. Cocchi that she need have no fear for her husband, was considered a hoax by Mr. Dooling. Acting Captain Alonzo Cooper of the Fourth Branch will apply to Park Commissioner Whitle of the Bronx today for permission to dynamite the ice at the upper end of the lake at Van Cortlandt Park to determine whether the missing girl fell through the thin ice there.

Elias Breeskin, 20 years old, who came here eight years ago as a Russian immigrant, is the owner of a Stradivarius violin of 1703, known as the Rougemont Stradivarius and considered one of the rarest and finest violins in the world. He received it last week as a gift from Edward Schafer, a member of the Stock Exchange, who bought it from the Rudolph Wurlitzer Company, of 113 West Fortieth Street, for $16,000, together with a Tourte bow at $950.

The story of how Mr. Schafer became interested in the young man's musical talents, how he arranged for his training under one of America's greatest violin masters, how the boy supported himself and his parents while he was taking violin lessons and how after he had won praise at recitals and it had been decided that he should go on a concert tour, Mr. Schafer bought him the violin, was learned yesterday.

Young Breeskin had studied the violin at the Conservatory in Cracow, Poland, before his parents were obliged to leave Russia because of the Jewish massacre. They came to America and settled in Washington. Through the generosity of a wealthy art patron of Washington, the boy was enabled to enroll in the Peabody Institute in Baltimore.

Friends of Mr. Schafer, who is a son-in-law of Oscar S. Straus, heard the boy play and they set about to try to do something for him. Mr. Schafer plays the violin himself and is a great music lover, so it was natural that his friends should suggest that the boy go to him. He agreed to undertake young Breeskin's musical education. Franz Kneisel, of the Kneisel quartette heard him play and was impressed, and Breeskin became his private pupil.

The young man's friends thought that whatever success he gained should be due largely to his own efforts, so they set him up in business in a small store, where he earned enough to support himself and his family after hours when he was not taking violin lessons or practicing. He was studying foreign languages and other subjects at Columbia University. He has given several recitals, the last one at Aeolian Hall a month ago.

INVENTOR IN POORHOUSE.

Paige Once Had $1,500,000—Typesetting Machine Failed.

CHICAGO, March 6.—James W. Paige, inventor of "one of the most remarkable pieces of mechanism ever put together," is in the poor house today at Oak Forest. Twenty-five years ago he was the owner of the Paige plant here, for the making of typesetting machines. Nearly $2,000,000 was invested in the plant. Mr. Paige was reputed to be worth $1,500,000 at that time. Mark Twain was one of the investors.

In the panic of 1893 Mr. Paige lost his money. His invention, although a mechanical marvel, proved impractical and needed further development, which never came. Mr. Paige then disappeared.

Mr. Paige's name was written into the Encyclopaedia Britannica and his invention was then described as "most remarkable."

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

Yesterday...6@6½ per cent. for the best names Monday.....6@6½ per cent.

Two quotations are for six months' paper.

Will Take Anything in Woolens.

Although the Fall business taken in the piece goods market has not been favorable to worsteds on account of their high price, woolens are at a premium and practically anything with wool in it is eagerly sought. Once the clothiers begin to put in their duplicates next month, big price advances are expected. On the late Spring goods, plaid designs have distinctly the advantage. The clothing manufacturers were impartial in their Fall purchases between plaids and stripes. No one yet, however, is prepared to say just what the leading dealers will be for next Fall, and there will be no decided opinion on the subject until after the retailers have been sounded out.

A Variety of Overcoat Styles.

While the clothing salesmen will not get started as a general rule before the first of next month on their Fall selling trips, orders have already been taken to a sufficient extent to sound out retail conditions. In the overcoat line quite a number of different styles are shown. All pinched back models are passé. Three designs are meeting with the most favor. They are the big heavy 48-inch coat, the 42 and 44 inch ulster, and the form-fitting garment. In the long coats the all around belt is not featured. In ulsters the half belt and the all-around belt seem to be attracting an equally good demand. In some quarters the raglan shoulder model is expected to come along well.

Satisfied with the Results.

Information coming from various quarters of the women's underwear trade indicates that makers of these goods have every reason to be satisfied with the Spring business they have taken on there to date. This is true of both silk and cotton garments, the call for the former being especially active from all accounts. A feature of the cotton garment trade is the amount of business passing on children's drawers. This is said to be due to the more prosperous state of the country, which is tempting a lot of mothers to lighten their sewing burdens as much as possible, especially in view of the good values offered. In the women's garments it is said to be a toss-up as to whether "over-the-head" or "step-in" chemises are the more popular. The latter are the newer and are said to be gaining in popularity with a rush. An excellent business on nightrobes is also told of, the most favored one being unusually attractive to feminine eyes.

Have No Complaints to Make.

Makers of ready-to-wear garments for infants and small children have no complaints to make of the business they have been getting this season. There is any complaint at all, it is not because orders have been slow in coming in, but rather that slowness of deliveries of piece goods and a lack of labor have retarded shipments of the finished garments. These delays, it is said, range all the way from an extent that might be called annoying to a degree that is downright serious. Especially is this true of hand-embroidered dresses. One of the features of the business has been the call for large outfits for white dresses for children ranging from infants to the 6 or 8 years old sizes. The call for wash garments has by no means been limited, and dainty colored frocks of chambray and other materials of a like nature have done very well. It is confidently predicted that the end of the season will show it to have been one of the very best in years.

Women's Fur Coats Attractive.

Sample lines of women's fur coats that are now being made up for the new season contain models that are said to surpass in beauty anything that has been offered in this line of merchandise for a long time. In the lines that come under the so-called popular-priced head, if that term can be stretched a little in relation to the new season's goods, because of their higher cost, Hudson seal is expected to repeat its success of the last several seasons, and attractive coats of marmot, nutria, natural raccoon, &c., both plain and with contrasting collars and cuffs, are thought very well of. The natural raccoon coats, for instance, are shown with collars and cuffs of beaver, Hudson seal, and other harmonizing furs. Very large collars and cuffs will feature the "dresser" coats. One model seen by a Times reporter yesterday had a beaver cuff that was fifteen inches deep, while cuffs that are six to nine inches deep are by no means considered extreme.

To Take Involuntary Vacations.

So active has been the demand for the more expensive grades of silk hosiery that the salesmen representing some of the best-known concerns are now facing the prospect of taking involuntary "vacations" of various lengths. This is because they have turned in all the business their concerns can handle for months to come. One set of salesmen traveling out of this city are known to have covered their firm with so much business that after their present swing around their territories there will be nothing for them to do for the next couple of months. These men are paid on commission, so the "vacation" will be taken at their own expense. They will have the pleasure of receiving checks regularly, however, as shipments on their orders are made, and in the long run they will find themselves better off. The amount of business already taken will keep the commission checks as fat as ever, and the salesmen will not be incurring traveling expenses to be paid out of their own pockets.

Against Fake Sales.

A bill covering fake sales is being framed which will be introduced, if possible, before the present session of the State Legislature ends by the Wholesale Men's Furnishings Goods Association. This organization has been quite successful in prosecuting cases of misrepresentation on the part of retailers, obtaining two convictions recently in two months' time. One of the features of the bill to be introduced is patterned on the Iowa law. This deals with transient merchants who go in for bankruptcy and fire sales and other spectacular stunts. If the bill is successful, the transient merchant will have to file a complete record of his stock with the county auditor and submit a sworn statement of the circumstances of the sale. He will have to tell also the origin of his merchandise. If any statements he makes are found false, he will be liable to punishment for perjury. With such information at hand, the association members believe they can adequately cope with the fake sale evil and at the same time protect the legitimate merchant.

Gray Goods Sales Again Large.

Buying of gray goods continued heavy in this market yesterday, with printcloths again the leaders in demand. It is estimated that total sales for Monday and yesterday exceed 500,000 pieces. Large sales of March-May 38½-inch 60-48s were made yesterday at 7¼ cents, with spots held an eighth higher. June-August deliveries of 39-inch 72-76s also sold freely at 9¼ cents, while a large movement of 36½-inch 64-60s at 7 cents, for Spring delivery, was noted too. Spot lots of 38½-inch 64-60s moved at 7¾ cents, though some sellers were firm for 7¼ cents. Further good business on this construction, for July-November shipment, was done early in the day at 7¼ cents, and later on the bids of 7¼ for this figure for the same delivery were refused. A good but scattered business was reported on sheetings, and sales of wide and narrow widths were also put through. In the fine goods the movement of lawns was the feature. Closing spot printcloth prices were:

DON'T WANT BOOKS OPENED.

That, Says Mathers, Is Why Anthracite Roads Reduced Rates.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, March 6.—The Pennsylvania Railroad and the Reading Railroad will sacrifice a million dollars annually of anthracite coal traffic revenue for the sake, it is contended, of not being compelled to open their books in court.

The railroads charge $1.70 for hauling a ton of anthracite to Philadelphia from the coalfields. They carry a ton back for 55 cents. This, according to Frank F. Mathers, a Director of the Philadelphia Coal Exchange, points to the real reason why the companies have assented to a reduction of 20 cents on each of the 4,000,000 tons of anthracite coal they haul annually to Philadelphia.

In February, 1914, the State Railroad Commission handed down a decision by which the $1.70 was reduced to $1.50. This decision the railroads appealed to the Dauphin County Court, where it has since lain, while the old rate continued in force. At the hearings railroad officials declared that they did not know what it cost them to haul a ton of coal.

"The railroads," said Mr. Mathers today, "do not want their books gone into in court, and when the case was reopened recently under the pressure of the public were glad to assent to a compromise by which they will lose only 25 cents a ton on the freight rate."

Profits Nearly Doubled in 1916.

The Computing-Tabulating-Recording Company earned in 1916 from its subsidiaries $2,163,000, as compared with $1,549,000 in the previous year. The net profit was $1,206,000, as against $699,000 shown in 1915.

The New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad reported yesterday its own and subsidiary company earnings for the month of January. The parent company's revenues showed substantial improvement. Operating revenues were $6,712,001, an increase of $708,000 over the corresponding month last year. The Central New England, owned by the New Haven, had a balance of $25,000 from its January earnings, against a deficit a year ago of $35,000. The New York, Ontario & Western, in which the New Haven has a half interest, earned only $9,000, as against $94,000 last January.

Other companies which earned less than expenses and interest were the Rhode Island and Company, Berkshire Street Railway, New York & Stamford Railway, Westchester Street Railway, and New York, Westchester & Boston.

American Cigar Earns $1,867,000.

The American Cigar Company had net earnings in 1916, after all charges for expenses, of $1,867,000, comparing with $1,830,000 for 1915. This includes only the dividends received from companies partly owned but total net profits of companies owned outright. The management states that "while the volume of business in 1916 shows a considerable increase, profits did not make a proportionate gain because of the higher cost of labor and materials.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Prices Make Further Progress —Rail Issues Reactionary— More Public Interest.

The stock market yesterday continued to move confidently. Recent buyers had profits, and in some stocks enough of these were realized to bring reaction. In some parts of the list, notably the railroads, there was also evidence of outside liquidation, but the market as a whole, and particularly the industrials, showed a good deal of strength. The forward movement was especially noteworthy in the shipping stocks, which made large net gains.

Even more significant, perhaps, than the strength shown by a large part of the list was the evidence which the day's experience supplied that the market was not being left quite as much as heretofore in the hands of purely professional traders. The public, or such part of it as Wall Street describes as semi-professional traders, were again appearing in the market, and frequently their appearance has been the prelude to the development of a more general public interest. The volume of dealings yesterday was considerably larger than it had recently been, which was one of the signs of an increase in the number of those participating in the trading.

The mailed fist the last couple of days has been showing that it has dismissed from mind the possibility of a craven surrender by the country in the face of foreign aggression. Its fear in respect to the consequences of the filibuster which succeeded in preventing the Senate's voting on the Armed Ship bill is steadily giving way before the belief that the Government will find a way to give American ships the protection which they are seeking. The lessening of doubt on this point has given increased effect to other considerations which have prompted strength in the market the last couple of days, including specifically the lookedfor resumption of business, partly because of the near approach of a season which will facilitate enlarged manufacturing effort, and partly because of the expected effects of large Government expenditures necessitated by the program for national preparedness. These are factors which are likely to exert influence for some time to come, even though they may occasionally be carried beyond the service of market influences through the development of other matters which may claim larger attention from time to time.

The contrary movement of the railroad stocks, or of many of them at least, was probably due to several influences, but the main of these may well have been the fact that the country is now awaiting the decision of the Supreme Court on the Adamson law, a decision on which had been looked for by many yesterday. The public finds it difficult to conceive of a resort by railroad labor to the general strike from which it was deterred by the passage of the Adamson act, even though that law should now be found by the Supreme Court to be unconstitutional. At the same time some concern is naturally felt over a labor controversy which affects the transportation system of the whole country. The controversy might well pass through a new and troublesome form in case the law passed last September should be held not to be binding upon the railroads because unconstitutional. That would necessitate a reopening of the problem and its treatment along new lines, but it seems practically impossible that the controversy should lead now to the strike which was fortunately averted last year. All the reasons which existed last year for believing that a strike would be averted by some means exist still, and to them has been added the further fact that both the railroads and their men are under a mandate of patriotism not to subject the country to the most serious possible strike at a time when the nation is facing a grave international situation. If it should come to a test of that sort, it will probably be found that both labor, as represented by the railroad brotherhoods, and capital, as represented by the managements of the roads, will prove more patriotic than did the handful of Senators who last week thwarted the wish of the nation.

LONDON MARKET IS QUIET.

Dealings in New War Loan Expected in the Near Future.

LONDON, March 6.—Money was in moderate demand and plentiful today. Discount rates were easy.

Gilt-edged securities were the feature of a quiet stock market. Small buying orders on the easy money conditions caused an advance, especially in Exchequer bonds, the war loans and consols. Dealings in the new loan are expected in the near future. In the foreign section Chinese bonds were good and Argentine rails showed signs of recovering. Rubber and oil stocks were the best of the miscellaneous issues. American securities were not affected by President Wilson's address. The small amount of stock held here and the regulation against speculation make the market practically immune from speculative influences.

BUYING BETHLEHEM STOCK.

Subscriptions for the new Bethlehem Steel Corporation stock were hurried to the Equitable Trust Company yesterday, the last day in which stockholders or holders of rights might get the shares at par. The lists closed at 3 o'clock, and in the last half hour the trust department was swamped by the inflow of messenger boys. Trust company officers said that up to 2:30 o'clock about $12,500,000 of subscriptions had been received, and it was evident at the end of the day that the full $15,000,000 had been taken up.

Last week the subscription rights sold as low as $3.90 each, and the Bethlehem B stock, for which the rights called, went as low as $106.25 a share. The market since then has indicated that many buyers considered the stock and rights "cheap," as a heavy volume of trading carried the stock up to $119 and the rights to $19. Purchasers of the rights at the lower levels stood to make a handsome profit, either by reselling before they expired or by taking up the shares they called for.

AMERICAN WOOLEN EARNS $8,210,761

15.31% FOR COMMON STOCK

Unfilled Orders on Books Now Are $52,000,000, Against 940,550,000 on Jan. 1.

The American Woolen Company's report for 1916 reflects the prosperity enjoyed by the expansion of home and foreign consumption of goods in profits amounting to $8,210,761, against $5,160,296 the year before. The sales increased 40 per cent. over those of 1915, and stockholders were informed in the statement issued yesterday that another prosperous period was expected this year.

The management charged off $2,346,943 for depreciation, compared with $1,979,685 the preceding year, and the balance for common stock dividends was $3,063,818, equal to 15.1 per cent. on the outstanding shares, contrasted with 6.40 per cent. earned in 1915. The profit and loss surplus as of Dec. 31 amounted to $11,368,939, a gain of $2,063,818 for the year.

"At the beginning of the present year," said President W. M. Wood, "there were $40,550,000 of unfilled orders on the books, and at the present time there are over $52,000,000. This is the result not only of reduction of European competition, subsequent to the war, but also, in greater part, to increased purchasing power of the people of the United States.

"Prices on wool have increased from 30 to 65 per cent. over prices at the close of 1915, while the cost of dyestuffs has risen much higher. Wool embargoes by foreign Governments, keen demand, and increasing uncertainties and excessive rates of transportation are factors that count heavily in establishing the present prices of wool. The needs of the company, for the coming season, however, have been anticipated by securing advance supplies. Despite the rapid advances made in American dyestuffs the domestic production is still far from meeting requirements of the wool manufacturing industry.

"A promising export trade has developed in certain lines of staple goods during the last year, and American Woolen is now directly represented in five South American countries, and in Cuba, besides having selling connections in many of the other markets of the world. It is the policy of the company to endeavor to become firmly established in foreign markets, while retaining a strong place in the home market, which is vastly more important."

Mr. Wood reported that the liquidation of the New Jersey corporation was practically completed. Last year the American Woolen Company took steps to remove its domicile from New Jersey to Massachusetts, the process being carried out through the formation of a new company and the winding up of the affairs of the old one.

INTERBORO EARNINGS SHOW HEAVY GAINS

Net Income in 3 Months of 1917 Is $2,753,000, or $210,549 More Than Last Year.

PAYS 5 PER CENT. DIVIDEND

For Nine Months of the Fiscal Year Net Income Will Be $6,973,832, Excluding Strike Expenses.

Directors of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, at their meeting yesterday, declared the regular quarterly dividend of 5 per cent. upon the stock, a dividend of 1¼ per cent. on the stock of the Subway Realty Company, and a dividend of 1½ per cent. on the preferred stock of the Interborough Consolidated Company. In recommending the dividends President Shonts said:

"The earnings of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company for the three months ending March 31 (February partly and March wholly estimated) show a gross operating revenue of $10,671,000, an increase of $1,045,221 over 1916. After the payment of all expenses, taxes, interest, and other fixed charges there will remain for the Interborough Rapid Transit Company a net corporate income of $2,753,000, an increase of $210,549 over the same period last year."

Mr. Shonts said that for the nine months of the fiscal year ending March 31 the gross operating revenue of the Interborough Company would be $29,604,024, an increase of $3,235,210 over last year, and that after all of the operating expenses and other charges were paid, except those growing out of the strike, there remained a net corporate income of $6,973,832, the increase over the same nine months of last year being $332,228.

"The surplus of the Interborough Company on Dec. 31, 1916," said Mr. Shonts, "was $16,200,402. Adding the net corporate income for the nine months ending March 31 gives an estimated total surplus as of that date of $21,022,402.

"Payment on April 1 of the usual quarterly dividend of 5 per cent., or at the rate of 20 per cent. per annum, on $35,000,000 capital stock outstanding, amounting to $1,750,000, will leave a surplus on that date of $19,272,402, an increase of $1,003,000 over the surplus of Jan. 1, 1917.

"The estimated surplus balance of the profit and loss account of the Interborough Consolidated Corporation as of March 31, 1917, will be $2,878,736. After paying out of that surplus the quarterly dividend of 1¼ per cent. on the $45,749,000 preferred stock outstanding, that dividend amounting to $686,100, there will remain on March 31, 1917, an estimated surplus of $1,987,636, an increase of $111,758 over the surplus balance at the end of the calendar year 1916.

"The foregoing is particularly gratifying in view of the fact that the March quarter contains one day less than the March quarter of last year. The earnings show with the continued development of the city there is a growing increased demand on the part of the public for service that your company is attempting to provide."

NEW INCOME TAX RULE

WASHINGTON, March 6.—The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has adopted a new income tax regulation authorizing the use by nonresident alien record owners of Income Tax Certificates Form 1,067 to disclose actual ownership and claim exemption from withholding at source of domestic dividend payments.

When a nonresident alien record owner of stock of domestic or resident corporations is an organization subject to withholding at the source of dividend payments, but is not the actual owner of the stock, such record owner may adapt income tax certificate, form 1,067, to disclose actual ownership and to claim exemption from withholding by striking out the words "to be filed with representatives in the United States of such foreign principal" in the caption and the words "in the United States" in the body of the form and executing the certificate as the representative of the actual owner, as provided in the space for signature.

Thus modified, these certificates may be filed with debtor corporations or their withholding agents in the United States and be accepted by them as evidence that the record owner is not liable for income tax on the dividends to be paid and hence is not subject to having tax withheld.

If the record owner does not exercise his right to disclose actual ownership, for the purpose of claiming exemption from having tax withheld at the source, debtor corporations and their withholding agents in the United States will be held liable on their stock records of ownership for the tax required to be withheld.

UPHOLDS SALE OF ROADS.

ST. LOUIS, March 6.—The sale of the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern, and the Missouri Pacific Railroads at foreclosure on Feb. 21 was confirmed by United States Circuit Judge Hook here today.

The court referred to a special master the claims of several hundred shippers, that the sale be set aside. These shippers claimed that the railroads were indebted to them. The master was directed to report April 15.

The two railroads were bought by the Reorganization Committee and the property is to be turned over to the new Missouri Pacific Company, which was incorporated under Missouri laws yesterday. It is understood that B. F. Bush, now receiver, will be elected President of the new company.

Land and Its Earnings

IMPROVEMENTS make real estate valuable by giving it earning power, which is the true basis of value. This fact is one of the fundamental principles of the Straus Plan of safeguarding loans on city property.

DECLINE IN COTTON

Upward Movement Checked, with Loss of 7 to 20 Points—Volume of Trade Light.

The cotton market yesterday did not continue the upward movement of the last few days, and, moreover, trading was much lighter in volume. The market opened steady at a decline of 16 points to an advance of 1 point, nearer months being relatively easy. The appearance of a few March notices, estimated at less than 4,000 bales, caused some scattering realizing. The lowest prices of the day were reached in the late trading, and the close was steady at a net decline of 7 to 20 points.

Sentiment on the floor seemed to be mixed. Reports of stiffer marine war risks and record-breaking ocean freight rates created an apprehension that the first weekly statement of the British Admiralty would make an unfavorable showing in respect to the amount of tonnage destroyed in the submarine zone. Otherwise there appeared to be no new factor in the market situation. Traders were chiefly interested in conjectures as to whether the adjustment between contract and spot values had gone far enough, or whether the action of the market reflected merely an easier technical position and temporary process of digestion.

WHEAT.

The wheat market was strong throughout the greater part of the day, and, while there was a late reaction under profit taking, final quotations were 2¾c higher for May and ¾c to ⅞c higher for the new crop positions. The cash situation was very strong, with high premiums being asked in all leading markets. In the local cash market No. 2 hard Winter was quoted at $2.20½; No. 1 Northern Duluth, $2.23½; No. 1 Northern Manitoba, $2.24, all free on board, New York.

CORN.

The trade at large takes a very bullish view of the corn market, and prices again soared to new high records. The great strength in the live hog market enhances the value of corn materially as a feeding proposition, while furthermore the visible supply is much under last year, and it is expected that the Government report on Thursday will show a very small amount of corn on the farms. In the local cash market No. 2 yellow corn was quoted at $1.23¼, cost, insurance, and freight New York. Export sales were estimated at about 400,000 bushels.

OATS.

The market for oats was fairly active, with an increased demand, on the theory that prices are low compared with other grains. In the local cash market prices were firm; standard was quoted at 78½@79c; No. 2 white, 78c; No. 3 white, 77½@77c; No. 4 white, 76½@77c; fancy clipped white, 80@82c; ordinary clipped white, 78@80c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market was again strong, and prices regained most of Monday's loss, in some cases making new high records. The hog market showed further strength, with prices in Chicago up as high as $14.90, and the phenomenal strength in the hog position is the basis for the steadily advancing prices of provisions. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 16,000; estimated for Wednesday, 35,000: Kansas City received 9,000 and Omaha 14,000.

COFFEE.

There was a renewal of scattering liquidation or trade selling in the coffee market here yesterday, and a further decline in prices. May contracts, for instance, eased off to 7.44c, and September to 7.10c, making a decline of 154 to 166 points from the high level reached on the bull movement of last January. Closing prices were at practically the lowest of the day, showing a net loss of 6 to 11 points. Sales were reported at approximately 86,750 bags. The local spot market was dull at a decline of ¼c, with Rio 7s quoted at 9¾c and Santos 4s at 10¼c. Range of prices:

SUGAR.

The futures market was weak, and, after opening 7 to 10 points lower, there was sharp decline due to heavy liquidation, with little or no support in evidence. The market was influenced by a lower spot basis for Cuban raw sugar, and also by reports of an improvement in the Cuban crop situation and by a bearish Cuban weekly statement, showing full receipts and big exports to the United States Atlantic ports. The close showed net declines of 14 to 20 points, with sales for the day 23,400 tons. Some of the day's business was in switching operations from March to later months. Range of prices:

Conditions in the market for refined sugar was steady and unchanged, at 7 to 8c for the granulated. Labor conditions are improving, but business was light, as refiners were still busy on old orders, and in a position to accept new business. Raw sugar developed an easier tone, due to the sharp declines in sugar futures prices and to the fact that general conditions in Cuba showed improvement, and that some mills which had ceased grinding had again started operations. There were sales of about 60,000 to 75,000 bags Porto Rican, March and April shipment, mostly to Howell's, with a small amount to a Philadelphia refiner, at 5.27c, cost, insurance, and freight, delivered. Cuban raws in the nearby positions were offered at 4¾c, cost and freight, for March, with no takers, and at the close of the market it was thought 4¼c, cost and freight, was the best price obtainable. Quotations for spot sugar were nominal and based on last sales as follows: Centrifugals, 5.46c; molasses, 6.18c, and cost and freight, 4¼c.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Further evidence of a broadening out of the market was afforded on the Consolidated Stock Exchange. Commission houses handled a large business, which included a heavy turnover of odd lots, and they reported an increasing interest on the part of the public. Following an early setback, prices advanced, with the gains very substantial in some instances. Profit taking, however, was reflected in the later dealings, imparting irregularity at the end of the day.

UNCURBED, SAYS BERNSTEIN

Herman Bernstein, who addressed the International Club at Columbia University last Saturday on "The Two Russias," made the following statement yesterday:

"According to newspaper reports, I was 'curbed,' my speech was 'edited,' I was compelled to 'cut my speed' to please Professor Prince. As a matter of fact, I said what I wanted to say.

"About twenty-five years ago I left Russia, where the press is muzzled, and where lecturers who champion freedom of speech find themselves exiled or imprisoned. I came to America, where the press, thank Heaven, is free, and in my writings I have endeavored to criticise Governments which do not tolerate freedom of speech and conscience. I would not under these circumstances submit to any censorship at the hands of Professor Prince or President Butler.

"I understand that the officers of the International Club, in order to secure Professor Prince's consent to my addressing the club, were compelled to promise that I would not speak against preparedness, that I would not discuss the present crisis in America, and would not criticise the Czar of Russia. I am sorry that the students gave such assurances for me. I resent most emphatically Professor Prince's peculiar restrictions. I have expressed my views with regard to the war time and again, and in the very beginning of the war, as well as after my visits to the war zones, I asserted that I would be pro-American first of all and above all.

"I resent Professor Prince's restrictions because they create a wrong impression that he and the system he represents have a monopoly on Americanism. The spirit recently displayed by President Butler and Professor Prince with regard to freedom of speech at Columbia is distinctly un-American and reactionary. It reflects discredit upon that great institution of learning. It tends to spread a demoralizing influence in American life, particularly among the younger generation, the leaders of thought of the America of tomorrow."

SNOWFALL COST $600,000.

If moderate weather prevails today the Street Cleaning Department expects to have all streets cleared of snow by nightfall. It was necessary to withdraw 100 plows from service yesterday because of the ice, and the 6,500 emergency workers were compelled to use picks until the sun melted the snow piles in the afternoon.

It is expected that this storm will cost the city about $600,000, bringing the total cost of snow removal for the Winter to more than $1,000,000. If the department had been able to hire the required number of 14,000 "snow fighters" and emergency men, it was said, it would have had the streets clear four hours after the last snow fell.

ROBBED ON FIFTH AVENUE.

As Miss Barbara Monell, daughter of Ambrose Monell, President of the International Nickel Company, was standing at Fifth Avenue and Forty-second Street yesterday afternoon, watching the Sixty-ninth Regiment march by, a man brushed against her and took a pocketbook containing several dollars out of her coat pocket.

Others in the crowd saw the act and Detective Henry Murze arrested a man who said he was Edward Rosenbaum, a clerk, of 98 Suffolk Street. The detective said he had known the prisoner formerly as Edward Adelson.

64 MEN INDICTED AS A COAL TRUST

108 Companies They Represent Also Accused by Federal Grand Jury Here.

DOMINATE IN STEAM FUEL

Charged with Agreeing at the Waldorf to Boost Prices So as to Net $34,000,000.

U. S. NAVY HIT BY THE RISE

Possible Penalties Under Sherman Act $5,000 Fines Each, and for Individuals a Year in Prison.

The special Federal Grand Jury which is conducting an inquiry into the high cost of food and fuel products returned two indictments yesterday, charging 108 corporations and sixty-four individuals with violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust act in that they had formed a combination in restraint of trade to increase the price of the semi-bituminous coal produced in the Pocahontas and New River regions of West Virginia. According to the indictments, the defendants, by agreement among themselves last January, were able from time to time to fix and increase the price of 22,000,000 tons of Pocahontas and New River smokeless coal, with an increased net profit to themselves of $34,000,000 per annum.

The indicted corporations include some of the largest coal distributers and operators in the East. Among them are the American Coal Company, Gastner, Curran & Bullitt, Inc.; the Pocahontas Fuel Company, the Smokeless Fuel Company, and the Chesapeake and Ohio Coal Company. Of the individual defendants a number live in New York. Thomas F. Farrell, General Manager of the Pocahontas Fuel Company; John A. Renahan, President of the Algonquin Coal Company; W. De L. Waldbridge, President of the American Coal Company; John J. Tierney, President of the Crozer Pocahontas Coal Company; Lawrence E. Tierney, President of the Elk Ridge Coal and Coke Company, and George C. Clausson, President of the Peerless Coal and Coke Company.

If convicted, the individual defendants would be liable to $5,000 fine or one year imprisonment, or both. The corporate defendants are liable only to the fine, which would bring to $870,000 the total amount of fines possible in the event of the conviction of all the indicted defendants.

A Meeting at the Waldorf.

The alleged combination, according to the indictments, dates back to a meeting held some time in January at the Waldorf-Astoria, when fifty-five men, representing the 108 corporations and practically controlling the soft coal industry in West Virginia, agreed to raise the selling price of their product at the mine from $1.25 per ton to $3 per ton. The new rate was to take effect with all contracts during the year beginning April 1.

This coal is used largely for steaming purpose and is much in demand by the United States Navy, manufacturing plants, steamships, railroads, schools, hospitals, and other institutions. It is mined only in the southern, southeastern, and southwestern counties of West Virginia, so that the elimination of competition from this region is said to have left the defendants in a position to fix and increase the price of the coal at will. Railroads, factories, and other consumers, the indictments state, have been deprived of the benefits of competition and are now paying $3 per ton at the mines and purchasers of spot coal are paying a great deal more than the contract prices. This coal was selling in Boston recently at $13 per ton.

The total annual output of the semi-bituminous mines in Virginia and West Virginia, according to the indictments, has been approximately 35,000,000 tons per annum. Most of it is transported to markets lying east of the Mississippi River and to Great Britain, France, Spain, and Italy. Of the total output 22,000,000 tons of New River and Pocahontas coal are controlled by the defendants, it is said, and this, before the formation of the alleged illegal combination, would have brought a total of $24,384,000, yielding at that price a considerable profit to the mines, and with the contract price at the mines increased from $1.25 to $3 per ton, the defendants, it is charged, reaped a harvest of $60,000,000, or $35,500,000 more than they would have realized as independents.

Besides the indictment charging the defendants with violation of the Sherman act there was a second indictment which specifically charged a combination of nine mining companies producing 3,000,000 tons of semi-bituminous coal. The companies named in this indictment were: Algoma Coal and Coke Company, Buckeye Coal and Coke Company, United Pocahontas Coal Company, Bottom Creek Coal and Coke Company, Turkey Coal and Coke Company, Ashland Coal and Coke Company, Pulaski Iron Company, E. E. White Coal Company, and Pemberton Coal and Coke Company. According to the indictment these companies, together with their selling agent, Castner, Curran & Bullitt, Inc., organized a uniform price plan and agreed to the pooling of the proceeds from the sale of their coal.

The following individuals, together with the corporations of which they are officers, were indicted:

E. H. T. Adams, Jr., Treasurer, Eureka Coal and Coke Co., and Treasurer and Secretary of the Lynchburg Coal and Coke Co.

The Other Indictment.

The individual defendants named in the pool indictment, implicating nine mining companies, were: William Beury, President, and William J. Beury, Secretary-Treasurer and Manager of the Algona Coal and Coke Company; W. C. Stephenson, President, and R. H. Poff, Secretary of the Buckeye Coal and Coke Company; Worth Kilpatrick, President, and J. A. Armstrong, Secretary and Treasurer of the United Pocahontas Coal Company; William L. Lewis, President, and Samuel W. Patterson, Vice President and General Manager of the Bottom Creek Coal and Coke Company; James A. McQuaid, Secretary and Treasurer, and Edward Watkins, Vice President and General Manager of the Turkey Gap Coal and Coke Company; W. J. Richards, President of the Ashland Coal and Coke Company, and Vice President of the Pemberton Coal and Coke Company; William A. Phillips, Secretary and General Manager of the Ashland Coal and Coke Company and President of the Pemberton Coal and Coke Company, and W. E. Watkins, Secretary and Treasurer of the Pemberton Coal and Coke Company; Horace L. Haldeman, President of the Pulaski Iron Company; E. E. White, President and General Manager, and Preston A. Vaught, Secretary of the E. E. White Coal Company.

Those in the above list not named in the first indictment are: William Beury, Worth Kipatrick, J. A. Armstrong, William L. Lewis, W. J. Richards, William A. Phillips, W. E. Watkins, Horace L. Haldeman and Preston A. Vaught.

The pool indictment states that the proceeds of the sales as provided for by the pooling plan were distributed ratably among the corporate mining defendants in proportion to the quantities of coal furnished by them respectively, in pursuance of the combination. Castner, Curran & Bullitt, Inc., the selling agents, according to the indictment, were compensated for their services on a tonnage basis.

Special United States Attorney Swacker, who produced the evidence which resulted in the indictment of all these coal interests, made a motion before Judge Van Fleet yesterday for the issuance of bench warrants, which will not be served, however, for several days, thus giving the defendants an opportunity to appear of their own accord. If they fail to appear within a reasonable time, Judge Van Vleet will order their immediate arrest.

CENSUS SHOWS FOOD STOCKS LOW UP-STATE

ALBANY, March 6.—Food stocks in Western New York are far below normal, according to an announcement made tonight by Charles H. Wilson, Commissioner of Agriculture, after receiving a report on the food census in six counties, Erie, Genesee, Cattaraugus, Chautauqua, Niagara, and Orleans. Commissioner Wilson denies that farmers are holding large quantities of food for a rise. In all the six counties the census found only 6,900 bushels of potatoes in the hands of farmers, while farmers face a problem in finding seed potatoes. The stocks of other products are said to be equally low. Of apples they have none. Here is a list of produce available for the market held by farmers in the six counties:

Beans, 40,047 bushels; onions, 709 bushels; turnips, 4,282 bushels; parsnips, 4,001 bushels; cauliflower, none; cabbage, 71 tons; butter, 41,175 pounds; cheese, 83,000 pounds, and eggs, 85,000 dozen.

Potatoes, 35,874 bushels; beans, 2,207 bushels; onions, 1,644 bushels; turnips, 4,422 bushels; apples, 14,240 bushels; butter, 146,695 pounds; cheese, 72,296 pounds; meat products, 10,051,540 pounds, and canned goods, 378,799 dozens.

Potatoes, 5,470 bushels; beans, 857 bushels; onions, 110 bushels; turnips, 80 bushels; parsnips, 262 bushels; carrots, 4,115 bushels; cabbage, 53 tons; apples, 1,943,000 bushels; butter, 663,392 pounds; cheese, 1,482,361 pounds; meat products, 12,000,000 pounds; and evaporated apples, 60,000 pounds.

In retail stores and markets the census takers found: Potatoes, 24,300 bushels; beans, 5,288 bushels; onions, 6,000 bushels; turnips, 3,700 bushels; parsnips, 1,100 bushels; carrots, 1,000 bushels; cabbage, 52 tons; apples, 11,000 bushels; butter, $1,000 pounds; cheese, 51,000 pounds; eggs, 60,000 dozens; meat products, 40,000 pounds, and canned goods, 486,000 dozen.

In cars consigned to local dealers in Buffalo were: Potatoes, 32,980 bushels; cabbage, 2 tons; eggs, 43,000 dozen; meat products, 21,000 pounds, and canned goods, 6,372 dozen.

CITY FOOD BILL HELD UP.

ALBANY, March 6.—The Gilchrist bill giving New York City authorities power to purchase and sell food, coal and other needfuls of life in an emergency was sidetracked in the Senate today when it came up for third reading. The bill was drafted in the Corporation Counsel's office and had the backing of Mayor Mitchel.

Senate Leader Elon R. Brown said he wanted time to read an opinion on the constitutionality of the bill which had been furnished by the Attorney General at his request before he voted on the measure.

Senator Alvah W. Burlingame, Jr., a Brooklyn Republican, pronounced the Gilchrist bill the worst measure ever offered in the Legislature. "It is here because of the rank cowardice of the New York City authorities," said Mr. Burlingame. "The Mayor and other members of the Board of Estimate apparently were afraid that some of those who besieged them with pleas for food at prices within their reach carried bombs, and so to save their own hides they did what they always do when in a tight hole; they shifted the blame to the Legislature."

The opinion, written by Deputy Attorney General Marion E. Lewis, declared that the Legislature was within its rights in authorising New York City to appropriate money with which to purchase the necessaries of life to be sold to the poor at cost during the present shortage of foodstuffs. The opinion is based on court rulings in other States, particularly Massachusetts, where similar questions have been raised. Deputy Attorney General Lewis, however, points out that he does not believe it would be a public purpose which the courts could sustain if a municipality should permanently engage in trade either with or without legislative authority.

No Lower Price for Coal in Sight.

Inquiry at the New York offices of large coal producing and mining companies yesterday failed to disclose information upon the usual plan of reducing the price of coal 50 cents a ton on April 1. Until last year mining companies had reduced the price in the Spring, and then advanced it month by month until the heavy demands of Winter took the whole supply. No decision upon the reduction in price will be made until later this month, it was said.

MRS. SANGER FLAYS MISS DAVIS'S PLANS

INMATES "LEARN TO HATE"

Will Deliver Her Message to Miss Davis's Club—Resists All Attempts to Take Her Fingerprints.

Mrs. Margaret Sanger, her term of thirty days' imprisonment over, left the Queens County Jail yesterday bringing with her what she calls a "message in trust" for the women of New York from the women of the jail. The message has nothing to do with birth control, advocacy of which sent Mrs. Sanger to jail, but, according to Mrs. Sanger, charges of studied cruelty and heartlessness in the treatment of the jail's population. Throughout the message occurs frequently the name of Katherine B. Davis, former Commissioner of Correction and now Chairman of the Parole Board.

Mrs. Sanger says she has determined to deliver her message at the meeting next Tuesday of the Women's City Club, which she has been invited to address and of which Miss Davis is an officer. Miss Davis may not be present, but Mrs. Sanger hopes she will. Miss Davis was out of town yesterday, and so an outline of the charges which Mrs. Sanger will make in her public address could not be submitted to her.

Mrs. Sanger, however, says she does not intend to make any campaign against Miss Davis. She merely regards herself, she explained yesterday, as the spokesman of the inmates of the Queens County Jail—"poor girls" Mrs. Sanger calls them.

An Atmosphere of Resentment.

"It is not of physical conditions that the girls complained," said Mrs. Sanger, in her home, 246 West Fourteenth Street, after an enthusiastic crowd of her friends and sympathizers had met her at the jail and carried her off to a luncheon, at the Hotel Lafayette, in celebration of her freedom. "It is not of these conditions though certainly they are sufficiently bad. It is the attitude adopted toward the girls, the atmosphere in which they are compelled to live.

"These are such that every inmate of the jail learns to hate Miss Davis with a bitterness and a depth of resentment that one would scarcely believe possible. Do you known that she cannot enter the men's mess hall? She has tried on one or two occasions, and each time has been greeted with cries of 'Get out. Get out.' A keeper told me that, and he told me that Miss Davis got out, too.

"The girls complain that Miss Davis delights in the exercise of authority that amounts to tyranny. For instance, one girl learned that her family, her child and her mother, had been made destitute by her imprisonment, which had deprived them of her support. She pleaded with Miss Davis to release her. Her sentence was an indeterminate one and its length was optional with the pleasure of Miss Davis. Miss Davis laughed at her request and then the girl begged at least to be told how long she must remain in jail so that she might, if it were possible, make arrangements to tide over matters until her release.

"'That's one of the beauties of the system—that you don't know,' Miss Davis replied.

"The poor girl told me the whole story. Another begged that her parents be not informed of her plight, and she told me that Miss Davis replied:

In Contrast with Sing Sing.

"It was Miss Davis who put up a fine mesh screen in the visiting room so that an inmate can see her callers only through a veil so fine that their features are scarcely distinguishable. Yet in Sing Sing a convict may receive visitors in a comfortable room, where both may be at their ease. Miss Davis removed the knives and forks and crockery and replaced the crockery with tin and agate ware. She did not replace the knives and forks at all, so that now, if you are unfortunate enough to be an inmate, you may tear your meat apart, when you get it, with your fingers. Miss Davis has taken away privileges that the inmates found it years to obtain. Her idea of prison management and of reform for prisoners seem to be a discipline so harsh and unfeeling that every decent emotion of her victims is killed by it.

Mrs. Sanger said another girl, heartbroken, had told her how a member of the Parole Board had gone to the trouble of a long journey into Connecticut to tell the girl's mother the whole history of her case; how she had been convicted of theft and how she was in jail. Recently, the girl had told Mrs. Sanger, word reached her of her mother's illness, brought on by this news for the girl had always been enabled to keep from her parents all knowledge of her wrongdoing.

Little of her own experience in jail would find a place in her address, Mrs. Sanger said, for she had a not unpleasant time, all things considered. Shortage of material had kept the authorities from putting her in the sewing squad, and so all she had to do was to care for her cell. John McCann, the Warden, and Matron Whittaker, she said, were kindly, humane persons, who made the duties of their offices as little unpleasant to the inmates as possible.

"I ought to say that of them," said Mrs. Sanger, "for other prisoners told me that they were the rare exception. But even they would not permit me to lecture to the girls. I offered to talk on any subject, but they said it was impossible. Just think! And those girls had practically nothing to do. There is no provision to educate the prisoners, so that an opportunity for real reform work is lost."

Mrs. Sanger's only real trouble while a prisoner arose over her refusal to be fingerprinted. Throughout her stay in jail Warden McCann tried to get her to submit, and finally on Monday night two keepers tried to force her to submit. They apologized for the necessity of using force, but they persisted, and for more than an hour they tried to force Mrs. Sanger's fingers on to the pad.

"I was bruised and exhausted," said Mrs. Sanger, "though they tried to be as gentle as they could, and at last they went to ask Mr. McCann if they should persist. He told them to do so, but after more resistance they abandoned the attempt. I cautioned them that they had no right to lay hands on me."

Warm Greeting from Sympathizers.

Discussion over this knot Mrs. Sanger in jail an hour and a half longer, while some forty persons were waiting for her outside. Meantime Miss Kitty Marion, an English militant suffragette, stood in the prison courtyard and sang suffragette words to the air of "The Marseillaise," the inmates joining in the chorus from the windows.

A testimonial dinner will be given to Mrs. Sanger and her sister at Terrace Garden March 16. She says she will make a lecture tour of the States between New York and Chicago.

Automobile exports reached a total in 1916 of $138,289,514, an increase of nearly $12,000,000 over 1915, according to the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. There was a decrease in exports of trucks from 22,094, valued at $50,839,308, in 1915, to 18,906, valued at $52,870,774, in 1916. But the shipments of passenger cars to foreign countries increased from 41,864, worth $35,045,090, in 1915, to 61,947, worth $48,725,067, last year.

In addition, there were exported in 1916 automobile parts to the value of $24,001,060, tires worth $15,211,949, and automobile engines to the value of $2,480,650. France was the largest buyer of our motor vehicles last year, to the value of $28,279,946, mostly trucks. England's purchases amounted to $17,063,619, also mostly trucks. Canada took cars to the value of $8,965,200, very nearly double her 1915 purchases. Australia bought our cars to the value of $5,727,232; the British East Indies $3,359,379, and Asia and Oceania $10,842,305.

Commercial motor vehicles have a show of their own at the Twenty-third Regiment Armory, Brooklyn. It is an exhibition of the Motor Vehicle Dealers' Association, in which no pleasure cars are to be seen, and it is the only show of its kind in this part of the country this year. There are forty-one exhibitors and every type of commercial vehicle is displayed, from the light delivery wagon to the ten-ton truck. Prices range from $850 to $5,000, with the average between $1,500 and $2,000.

In practically all the features of commercial design improvements are shown. Nearly all motor trucks are now fitted with electric starters, just as are the pleasure automobiles. Devices for lifting, hoisting, and removing show much ingenuity. One of these is the hydraulic lift, fitted on large coal trucks, by means of which the load may be dumped. By another new appliance an automobile may be changed into a farm tractor.

TIFF IN PEKINGESE FIRM.

A quarrel between two women partners in the business of breeding, buying, and selling Pekingese dogs came before Supreme Court Justice Delehanty yesterday on an application by Mrs. Lulu M. Sherwood for the appointment of a receiver of the Wensen Kennels at Roslyn, L. I., and for an order directing her partner, Miss E. Marie Sinclair of 322 West 100th Street, to account for six Pekingese dogs and one Bolton terrier.

Mrs. Sherwood alleges that Mrs. Sinclair took these dogs, valued at $1,500, from the kennels on Feb. 21 last, and appropriated certain books and papers pertaining to the business. Argument on the application was adjourned yesterday to give counsel for Miss Sinclair an opportunity to answer the charges. The defendant denies that she has converted any of the property of the copartnership.

The local office of the Wensen Kennels has been in the apartment house in which Miss Sinclair has her home, for which she signed a lease on condition that her dogs were to be permitted to use the elevator.

a Philadelphian started to make tools and supplies for dentists. His name was S. S. White.

About this time Dr. Thomas W. Evans, another Philadelphian, started a dental practice in Paris. His technique made American dentistry famous and his practice included no less a personage than Napoleon III.

Just as Dr. Evans was part and parcel of the rise of the profession to its present eminence, so "S. S. White" has constantly meant "Standard" in dental equipment since 1844.
